The screw-steamer Jura arrived at Cork from St. John, N. B., on the 11th inst.

The steamer Borussia, from Hamburg for New-York, put into Liverpool to repair damage to her propeller, and sailed again for New-York on the 14th.

The American ship Lexington, recently reported ashore on the west Coast of Ireland, after having been got off, was totally lost near Valentia Island as she was being towed to Liverpool, and three men were drowned. The hawser broke during a violent storm, and the ship sunk.

The ship Red Jacket, from Melbourne, arrived at Liverpool, Oct. 13, with 70,000 ounces of gold. The dates have been anticipated.

Later advices have been received in England from India. General HAVELOCK fought and won his ninth battle on the 16th of August, after which he retired once more to Cawnpore to await the arrival of General OUTRAM, with reinforcements. No attack had yet been made upon Delhi. Details of the news, which is important, will be found below.

The commercial intelligence from Great Britain is most important. In consequence of the news from the United States, received by the Persia, the Bank of England had again advanced its rate of discount to 7 per cent. Consols fell to 86⅜ soon after, but on the day the Baltic left they had rallied to 88.

The race for the great Cesarewitch Handicap, at Newmarket, resulted in the triumph of Mr. TEN BROECK'S Prioress. Thirty-four horses ran, and on the first attempt there was a dead heat between Prioress, El Hakim and Queen Bess. The deciding race between these three was won cleverly by Prioress, by a length and a half. The success of the American mare was greeted with great cheering, and Prioress immediately became first favorite in the betting for the Cambridgeshire stakes, to be run for at Newmarket on the 27th of October. Before the race 100 to 1 was laid against Prioress. The value of the stakes exceeded £2,000 sterling.

Effect of the American Panic in Europe.

From the London Times.

SATURDAY, Oct. 10—P. M.

The unfavorable return from the Bank and the further fall in the American Exchanges, telegraphed from Liverpool on the arrival of the Persia, caused the funds to open this morning at a fresh decline of a quarter per cent., the market continuing to give way till near the termination of business. Consols for money, which left off yesterday at 89⅜@½, were first quoted 89½@¾. At this they remained for some time, but the excessive demand for money observable in the discount-market, coupled with renewed withdrawals of gold, strengthened the impression that on Thursday next, or even previously, the Bank may find it necessary to go up to 6½ or 7 per cent., and sales were pressed till the price was 88⅞. Ultimately there was a slight reaction, and the final operations were at 89@½ for money, and 89⅛@⅜ for the 10th of November. India Stock closed at 208@210; India Bonds, 25s.@20s. discount; and exchequer-bills, 8s.@4s. discount.

At the Bank of England the demand for discounts was excessive, the applications being more numerous than on any day for months past. This rush was doubtless not to provide for immediate wants so much as to anticipate the possibility of another upward movement on Monday, or, at all events, on Thursday.

The closing quotation of the French Three per Cents. on the Paris Bourse this evening was 67f. 25c. for both money and account, showing a fall of nearly three-eighths per cent.

At Hamburg the rate of discount has advanced to 7¾.

About £60,000 of gold was taken from the Bank today for exportation. As the shippers of bullion were among the principal sellers of Consols it is inferred that they are preparing to act on a still larger scale, and that they consider another immediate movement in the rate of discount inevitable.

The advices from America, telegraphed to London this morning, are not worse than had been anticipated. They show, however, that, although an early rebound may be possible, the mischief and confusion have now been too extensive not to require the lapse of many months for their consequences to be retrieved. The charge for discount at New-York is still apparently at the rate of from 24 to 36 per cent. per annum on the choicest paper, and from 60 to 70 per cent. for the secondary descriptions. At such a time the prices of all descriptions of stocks must, of course, be little more than nominal; but it appears that, although a further heavy reduction had taken place, there was a partial recovery before the departure of the mail. On the whole, it seems the distrust had certainly not increased, and a few days' pause under such circumstances usually promises a turn. The New-York Banks had fairly maintained their stock of specie, although they had been called upon for large supplies to support their correspondents in the interior, and another arrival from California was nearly due. As the stock during the previous week had received an addition of £270,000, and all that might arrive would be retained, it is evident that nothing short of some new and wholly unexpected development of mismanagement or fraud, or a sudden return of lunatic terror was likely to carry the crisis beyond its present point. The suspension of the Baltimore banks, which was arranged by a concerted resolution, is described to have had the anticipated effect of relieving the prevailing apprehensions in that city and throughout Maryland, and it is now announced that an arrangement equally general has been adopted at Philadelphia, and that the State Legislature of Pennsylvania has been convened to legalize such future measures as may be requisite. It is the duty of all banks, at periods of panic, unless they can see that they are in a position to meet every claim, to suspend at once, and not to allow the selfish people, who are the promoters of the calamity, to run off with assets which should be equally divided among all. Hence the present resolution must be regarded with satisfaction, although it is plain, from the way in which the New-York banks have stood their ground, that the necessity for it could have resulted only from gross mismanagement. It will, moreover, have the good effect of causing specie to flow to those points where suspension has been avoided, such as New-York, New-Orleans, &c. The impression that a year must elapse before the Philadelphia and Baltimore banks will be in a condition to resume specie payments will most likely be fully borne out, but unless the Legislatures of their respective States should commit the fault of allowing them to extend their issues during the period of inconvertibility this circumstance need not necessarily create much loss or annoyance. With regard to the further effect which the panic will produce in Europe it is still to be hoped that the enormous inconvenience experienced from our non-receipt of remittances will not be aggravated by bullion in large sums being absolutely withdrawn from us. The Vanderbilt, which was shortly to arrive, was expected to bring £100,000, it is presumed from France; but the uncertainties as to the duration of the panic are likely to limit any speculative shipments from England. Although it appears that some produce bills have been sold at New-York as low as 100, the profit on their purchase was doubtless considered not more than sufficient to cover the risk of their being drawn upon weak houses that might be found to be compromised by the failure of American correspondents. The chief danger of gold being sent hence to New-York is on account of the large additional purchases of securities which our capitalists have been tempted to make at present prices. A fall equal to about 4s. 6d. per quarter in wheat had led to the dispatch of several cargoes of wheat and flour to Liverpool, but the unfavorable rate of exchange operated greatly to counteract the the apparent advantage to be realized from the prices in our markets. As respects the commercial losses to be sustained on this side, very heavy amounts are believed to have fallen on Lyons and Paris. Here it is feared Manchester, Bradford and Glasgow will suffer considerably. From the latter place a serious case of embarrassment is reported this afternoon.

MONDAY, Oct. 12—P. M.

The Bank of England have to-day raised their rate of discount from 6 ℔ cent., which was adopted on Thursday last, to 7 ℔ cent.

This measure was fully anticipated, and, from the extent of the applications to-day, it is doubtful if a further movement will not immediately be found necessary. The amount of bullion withdrawn has been only £9,000, but it is asserted that £400,000 will be dispatched to New-York and Boston by the Baltic and Persia on Wednesday and Saturday next, and, as the Indian exchanges show an adverse alteration of 1½ ℔ cent. at Bombay and 2 ℔ cent. at Calcutta, it is also anticipated that the shipments in that direction by the overland mail of the 20th will be larger than was at one time thought probable. With these prospects a fresh advance can scarcely be avoided, and perhaps we may again see the rate at 8 ℔ cent., the highest point it has ever reached during modern experience, and at which it stood in October, 1847. In proportion, however, to the suddenness of the pressure will be the rapidity of the ultimate reaction, and, as on that occasion the rate within a year afterwards went back to three per cent.—there will, in the present case, be reason to look for an extraordinary turn of the tide as soon as the immediate difficulty shall have been completely met. Notwithstanding the tempting rates of exchange at New-York and Calcutta, the transmission of specie thither under existing circumstances must be a hazardous speculation, since the question in each instance is not what may be the apparent profit, judging from the present advices, but what will have been the course of the markets in the interval before the operation can be carried out. In America the arrears now due to England and the continent are enormous, and are accumulating every week, and the moment the panic subsides and the influence of the fortnightly gold arrivals from California again begins to be felt, the scarcity of bills upon us may be as remarkable as their present abundance. In India, likewise, the falling off in the shipments of produce, and the demand upon the Government for payments to English steam companies for the transport of troops must exercise a strong effect in restoring more favorable conditions. There is, consequently, nothing to excite apprehension that the disturbance will be protracted. The sole cause for anxiety is lest the fall of such houses in the Provinces and elsewhere as are unavoidably compromised by the American failures, and the fluctuations in the markets for Eastern produce, should beget any vague terror, calculated to lead even to a single day of general distrust. The belief is, however, that the decided action of the Bank has removed all danger on that account. So well is the effect of a rapid advance in the rate of discount now understood, that, when the necessity for it exists, a vigorous course of action is at at once appreciated. It is unquestionable that this was the effect observable to-day. When the advance to 7 ℔ cent. was announced every one saw that the work of protection was in progress, and the conviction that in case of need there would be no hesitation in making another movement established a sense of perfect security. The funds went down, and there was much uneasiness respecting the probable fate of the manufacturing firms that have sustained losses, but there was no fright lest a period might be approaching at which it would be impossible even for perfectly solvent to obtain money on any terms. The absence of excitement to-day among the banking and commercial community afforded a striking contrast to the scenes that used to be witnessed when the true principles which regulate the currency were unrecognized. If any regret was expressed it was simply that the rise to 7 per cent. had not been resolved upon a day or two earlier. Altogether the feeling exhibited was such as to excite pride in our healthful system of finance, and to confirm the impression that, although this shock from America has come upon us in the midst of the Indian mutiny, we shall be able to withstand it, so that its consequences, heavy as they must necessarily be, shall not destroy confidence or interrupt the general welfare of the country.

The fluctuations in the Funds to-day have been extremely great, and although there was a partial rally from the lowest point, the final quotations, as compared with those of Saturday, show a decline of more than 1½ ℔ cent. Just before the commencement of business, it appeared as if the market would open buoyantly from the effects of the Indian news, but rumors were at once circulated that a further movement on the part of the Bank was imminent, and the first regular quotation was 88⅝@¾ for money, being a decline of ½ ℔ cent. The formal notification of the advance in the rate was made forthwith, and a gradual fall then took place to 88¼. Subsequently a succession of heavy sales caused further weakness, and transactions at length took place at 87¼, the lowest point reached during the present year. Towards the close, however, there was less unsteadiness, and the last transactions were at 87⅞@¾ for money, and 88⅛ for the 10th of November.

Some of the sales during the afternoon were said to have been effected to close the account of a large speculator for a rise, but the publication of the rate of exchange, from Calcutta and the expectation of shipments of gold being about to be made to New-York, also induced many operations. There was likewise an apprehension that mercantile stoppages would be announced from the provinces, and that the various banks throughout the country would be likely to sell stock to provide for the wants of their customers. An erroneous report was at the same time spread of sales having been made on account of the Bank of England. The rate for loans on Government securities from the present account to the 10th of November was 6½ ℔ cent. Bank Stock closed at 211½@212½ ex. dividend; Reduced, 86⅛@87; New Three ℔ Cents., 86⅞@87; and India Stock, 208@210. There were very few transactions either in India Bonds or Exchequer bills. Some small sales of the former took place at 30s. discount; and of the latter at 15s. discount.

The final quotations this evening from the Paris Bourse were 66f. 80c. for money, and 66f. 90c. for the end of the month, showing a fall of a little more than three-eighths ℔ cent. At Vienna there has been a decline of three-quarters ℔ cent.

The discount houses have increased their rate of allowance to 6 ℔ cent. for money at call, and 6¼ ℔ cent. for deposits with short notice, being an advance of three-quarters ℔ cent. The National Discount Company have notified that their terms are respectively 6¼@6½ ℔ cent. The rate of the joint-stock banks for deposits will be 6 ℔ cent.

The political accounts from India to-day were received with universal satisfaction, every one being disposed to consider that all uncertainty with regard to the future success of our troops in the reëstablishment of authority is at an end. From Bombay the commercial accounts also are not unsatisfactory, since they show a demand for imported goods at advancing prices; but the intelligence from Calcutta of the Bank of Bengal having refused to make advances on Government paper or commercial paper except of short date, has occasioned fears that the step may have led to a serious pressure on the other banks, as well as on the mercantile houses. It was known on the arrival of the previous mail that the Bank of Bengal had already refused such advances, but it was added that their Government had overruled their objections. It now appears that the latter have given way. The satisfactory course for the Bank, instead of refusing absolutely any class of paper, would have been for them to have raised their rate to whatever point the demand would justify. The true way to produce a panic is to render any large class of securities altogether unnegotiable. A rate almost prohibitory may be fixed without the public taking alarm, because they have then the feeling of security that in the case of the worst emergency they are not shut out from all possibility of aid.

Four or five failures—some of them of importance—were announced from Glasgow to-day. The principal was that of J. MONTEITH & Co., whose liabilities are believed to be extensive. They were large shippers of Glasgow goods to America and elsewhere. The other houses mentioned are PATTESON & Co., MACDONALL & Co., and WALLACE & Co. Prompt measures were felt to be necessary to prevent as far as possible any increase of disaster, and a Committee of the Western Bank of Scotland had been summoned to investigate the position of these and other firms.

The private letters from New-York to-day all express considerable confidence that the height of the panic had passed. A large proportion of the houses that had been brought down are described as having had no sound basis, but some of the included are those of establishments that stood extremely well. Among these were GARNER & Co., a commission house, which is said to have enjoyed credits to a large amount from leading firms on this side, and ABBOT, DODGE & Co., in the flour trade. All the banks at Providence, Rhode Island, had stopped by a concerted arrangement, and the same result is described as had been experienced at Baltimore, the panic being at once mitigated. From Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore the advices show an improvement. The discount on the note circulation of the suspended banks at the two latter cities was not more than 4 or 5 per cent., bills on New-York being purchasable on those terms. The Bank of Pennsylvania has advised their London correspondents that remittances will be made with undisturbed regularity.

Purchases of American Stocks by English capitalists continue on a large scale, and this circumstance constitutes at the present moment a material addition to the adverse course of our relations with that country.

The advices from Paris state that at a meeting of the Bank of France, on Saturday, the necessity for an advance in the rate of discount was discussed, and that it is now considered certain. The Directors, however, were anxious that a slight delay should take place after the ill-advised increase of facilities adopted only a week ago. During the past month about a dozen failures are stated to have occurred in Paris, but all of second-rate houses. From all parts of the Continent there are accounts of increasing pressure, and at Frankfort, Berlin, Vienna and Turin the banks will discount only short paper, and that in certain limited amounts for the several applicants.

The reports of the trade of the manufacturing towns during the past week show considerable dulness, in consequence of the increase in the rate of discount and the losses from American failures. At Manchester business has also been again affected by the stoppage of several silk houses. Birmingham is stated thus far to have escaped very well the effects of the New-York crisis. Bradford, it is feared, has suffered to some extent, and at all points the cessation of orders from the United States is likely to cause inactivity during the next few months.

In the general business of the port of London during the past week there has been little change. The total of ships reported inward was 212, showing a decrease of 15 from the previous week. The number cleared outward was 109, including 20 in ballast, showing also a decrease of 14. The number of vessels on the berth loading for the Australian colonies is 64, being 7 more than at the last account.

TUESDAY, Oct. 13—P. M.

The fluctuations in the funds to-day have again been most rapid and extensive. The market opened with great weakness, at a fall of nearly 1½ ℔ cent. from the heavy prices of last evening, but there was subsequently a considerable reaction, and a more healthful tone became apparent in all departments of business. Consols for money, which left off yesterday at 87⅝@¾, were first quoted 86½. No sales, however, were pressed at that price, and a gradual recovery took place, which was assisted by several purchases on the part of the public. The range was then between 87 and 87¼ until noon, when the Government Broker appeared as a buyer of £10,000 Exchequer bills on account of the Sinking Fund. This increased the tendency to confidence, and ultimately, notwithstanding an announcement of the Bank of France having adopted a rise of one ℔ cent. in their rate of discount, transactions were effected at 87⅞@⅞ and 88@¼ for the 10th of November. After regular hours, there was less firmness, and the quotations were 87⅞@⅞ for money, and 88@⅛ for the account. To-morrow is settling day, and the failure of a broker, who was involved in the losses which occurred about a month or two back in the Liverpool share market, was announced.

In the foreign exchanges this afternoon there was a considerable advance in the rate upon Hamburg, Amsterdam and Paris, (in the latter case for three months' bills,) were also quoted higher.

The final quotations of the French Three per Cents. on the Paris Bourse, this evening, was 66f. 70c. for both money and account, showing a fall of an eighth.

The great decline in the funds at the opening this morning was caused by the anticipation of a further speedy movement of the rate of discount to 8 per cent. The public, however, did not seem to share the alarm of the dealers, and the course of business gradually assumed comparative steadiness. The fact that even at present quotations specie remittances cannot be made from England to the United States at any material profit, supposing the returns to be furnished in the highest class of bills, allayed the fears as to the prospect of any continuous shipments to that country; while, with regard to India, it transpired that some of the orders for sending out silver on the twentieth may possibly be countermanded, the advance in the rate of discount here and other considerations rendering the speculation doubtful. The absence of gold withdrawals from the Bank, an improvement in the foreign exchanges, and the arrival of the Red Jacket from Melbourne with £264,000, likewise contributed to the more favorable feeling. The movement adopted by the Bank of France, so far from having an adverse influence, operated well by lessening the probability of a panic, which could not fail to react on London, being brought about through mismanagement on that side. On the other hand, the announcement of a rather large commercial failure, (Messrs. ROSS, MITCHELL & Co.,) and the apprehension of further similar events in the manufacturing towns prevented any strong reliance that an increase of stringency in the money market can be avoided. The extent of the applications at the Bank, which were again extraordinary, also operated to check the tendency to recovery, although a large portion of these may possibly have originated in the desire to provide against the anticipated further advance. On the whole, however, the day may be considered to have passed satisfactorily. To-morrow, probably, a better opportunity will exist for forming a judgment as to the future. The dividends then commence, and a large amount of advances will have to be repaid to the Bank. The Consol settlement will also take place, and four days' later news from New-York, will, perhaps, be received at Southampton by the Ariel.

The Bank of France have to-day raised their rate of discount to 6½ ℔ cent. It has stood at 5½ ℔ cent. since the 25th of June, and in the interval there has been a falling off of £2,400,000 in their stock of bullion, although artificial purchases at a premium have been continued upon an extensive scale. The measure seems to have been anticipated on the Bourse.

A statement just circulated that the India-house are in want of more money, and that the Bank has notified to the Government their inability to furnish it, is wholly erroneous. The India Company at this moment would be willing to lend money, the greater part of the recent credit opened at the Bank being unemployed. For future wants they still hold a large reserve of Stocks and Exchequer-bills, and there is no reason to doubt that the expectation held out of their financial position being such as to enable them to provide for all wants until the meeting of Parliament will be fully realized. Of course, if the local Government were to announce the necessity of a large sum of specie being sent to Calcutta, an emergency would then be presented which would call for special action; but it is belived that no such intimation has yet been received, and that in the absence of exceptional circumssances of this kind there will be nothing to disturb the calculations originally made.

From the London News, Oct. 13.

A commercial crisis has fallen upon us somewhat suddenly, aggravated by the monetary pressure existing in every part of the Continent, by the extensive disasters in America, and by the serious derangement of our commercial operations consequent on the Indian outbreak. We have latterly taken every occasion to point out the inevitable tendency of the various causes in operation to create for a considerable period a stringency in the money market, and we have inculcated a caution which was of the utmost consequence, notwithstanding the general soundness of commerce. It is our duty now to show that, although unforeseen circumstances have increased the anticipated pressure in a most alarming manner, and have brought about calamities more extensive than we could have calculated on or guarded against, the greatest peril of the present moment arises from the danger of the public misunderstanding the true bearing of the recent measures taken by the Bank of England, and by their yielding to a panic fear and forgetting the history of past seasons of commercial pressure.

The failures in America, by depriving those houses which have large dealings with that country of their expected remittances, and forcing upon them the necessity of nevertheless providing for their other engagements, have created a great and sudden demand on their parts upon the disposable capital of the country. This demand has arisen, moreover, at a season of the year when the amount of unemployed capital is usually at its minimum, when the public deposits in the Bank of England are at their largest, and just before the payment of the October dividends has again put some six millions of money into circulation through its ordinary channels. The returns of the Bank of England are now anxiously looked for, and it is from these returns, if properly understood, that the public should derive the confidence which, more than anything else, will not only mitigate the existing pressure, but will cause it to pass away with the greatest rapidity, and with a minimum amount of injury. Ten years ago, when, at the same period of the year, a similar crisis occurred—which the very coincidence of dates will force upon people's minds, tending to lead them to overrate the present danger—we stood in a very different position. We have no longer the dread, as we did then, of the efflux of bullion, for since that period a sum, variously estimated from twelve to twenty millions of gold, has been put permanently into circulation in the country, and forms a last resource which was not available in 1847. It is worth while to look back to that period, to compare the Bank returns of that date with those just issued, and to see how rapidly the state of the Bank accounts, which led to a panic having such fearful results, rectified itself by a natural movement of money which we shall show to be periodical. On Oct. 2, 1847, the Reserve of notes in the Bank of England amounted to £3,409,300, and the amount of "Other Securities" to £21,259,929, the rate of discount being then 5½ ℔ cent. On Oct. 3, 1857, the Reserve of notes was £4,606,040, the "Other Securities" £21,835,843, and the rate of discount also 5½ ℔ cent. It must also be borne in mind that of these "Other Securities" £1,000,000 is represented by the bonds recently lodged by the East India Company, which had proportionally reduced the amount of the Reserve. The payment of the dividends in 1847 reduced the reserve of notes to £2,630,115 on the 16th of October, and on the 30th they had fallen to £1,176,740, the rate of interest having at the same time risen to 8 ℔ cent. A panic had set in, for the public, anticipating an entire exhaustion of the Reserve, hoarded its disposable capital, and credit for the time was annihilated. The rate of interest in the money market consequent on this holding back of capital was enormously exaggerated, and unnecessarily so, as events immediately demonstrated. The celebrated letter, so much canvassed, was issued, authorizing the Bank to extend its issues; but it never became necessary to act upon it, for in the natural course of events the notes and bullion began to flow back to the Bank through the Government deposits, and within a month of the date above quoted, the Reserve of the Bank had risen from £1,176,740 to £4,228,095, an increase of £3,051,355. By the end of the year it had reached £7,786,180, and the rate of interest had fallen to 5 ℔ cent.

The circumstances attending the panic of 1847 may not be familiar to many of our readers, but all must remember the monetary pressures of 1855 and 1856, when exactly the same phenomena occurred, minus the intensity of alarm and the calamities which were evidently attributable in a great measure to that cause. The following table will show the movements of the Bank accounts at the two periods referred to:

	Reserve of Notes.	Other Securities.	Rate of Discount.
Oct. 13, 1855..	£4,557,490	£19,280,446	5½ ℔ cent
Oct. 11, 1856..	3,521,620	21,049,117	6@7 ℔ cent
Oct. 27, 1855..	4,262,560	18,534,600	6@7 ℔ cent
Nov. 1, 1856..	2,943,665	19,053,446	6@7 ℔ cent
Dec. 1, 1855..	5,505,845	18,868,757	6@7 ℔ cent
Dec. 6, 1856..	5,151,380	17,389,715	6½ ℔ cent

It will be seen that the Reserve reaches its lowest point just after the payment of the dividends, and that it rapidly increases during the next two or three weeks from natural causes, even when the rate of interest remains very high, and might be supposed to indicate that an extremely active demand for money, amounting to a pressure, was going on. There is no doubt that had a panic existed last year at this period, the consequences would have been most calamitous; but we trust that both the public and the Bank have profited by the experience of the past. That the Bank has done so, we believe, by the promptitude with which it has taken very decided steps, the purport and effect of which ought not to be misunderstood. By its sudden increase of the rate to 7 per cent., it effectually checks the tendency to export bullion created by the movement in Foreign Exchanges; and this measure, instead of creating alarm, is eminently calculated to inspire confidence, and exhibits a determination on the part of the Bank to maintain a reserve proportionate to its liabilities, until in the course of a few weeks the six millions of dividend money shall have been distributed through myriads of channels, and shall have become once more at the disposal of the mercantile community.

That the large failures in America must of necessity entail heavy losses on many of our merchants and bankers, or that the general state of European finance will maintain for a considerable period a great tightness in the money market, it would be folly to forget or to treat lightly. We cannot, however, see that there is anything thus far to create alarm as to the power of the Bank of England to maintain its credit, and to assist largely the financial world in bearing that pressure, or in the general state of our commerce to induce a belief that there are any elements existing, like the overtrading of 1847, to render such calamities as then ensued probable. It is not, however, to be wondered at that the occurrence of the American panic in 1837, and our own in 1847, should, by a singular coincidence of decennial periods, weigh heavily on unreflecting minds.

From the London Post (City Article), Oct. 13.

There has been a panic in the market for the Funds to-day, occasioned by the advance of the minimum rate of interest and discount to 7 per cent. by the authorities of the Bank of England. This extreme measure has taken a large portion of the public by surprise, inasmuch as it was scarcely apprehended that the position of affairs was so unsatisfactory as to induce the Governor of the Bank to exert the power vested in his office to advauce the rate of interest without waiting, as in the ordinary course, for a resolution of the Board of Directors, It appears, however, from the promptitude with which this change has been made and the extent to which it has been carried, that the Governor of the Bank considers he has found, in the position of the affairs of the Bank at the close of last week, a sufficient warrant for inflicting on the whole mercantile community of this country the additional burden of 1 ℔ cent. in the rate of interest within five days of the time when an advance to 6 ℔ cent. had been made. It is true that the position of monetary and commercial affairs in the United States is most unsatisfactory, as it is equally true that under ordinary circumstances a large outflow of bullion would take place from this country with a much lower rate of profit than is offered by the state of the exchanges; but still it may be questioned whether the dispatch of bullion thither will be very large, in consequence of the feeling of insecurity which would attend such operations. The disturbed condition of financial affairs on the Continent of Europe more immediately affects us, but it is notwithstanding open to much debate (upon the data possessed by the public,) whether the evils that can scarcely fail to be caused by so merciless an addition to the rate of "discount" as 1½ ℔ cent., within less than a week, will be compensated by the results expected to follow so serious and so determined a step. For the past three years we have had a periodic return of these extreme measures on the part of the Bank. The mercantile community have, however, been able to support the pressure with some degree of impunity hitherto, from the high state of credit concurrently maintained, and the facility with which commodities were absorbed by the chief markets of the world. If the rate of profit on our exports was but small, it was compensated for to a considerable extent by the profits realized on imports. The monetary pressure in other countries, although severe, was not excessive, and not nearly so general. India and the United States always offered a safe outlet for our productions, and capital could always be raised at the market rates for carrying on commercial operations. Money, though dear, was easy. Unfortunately now the case has somewhat changed. India is distracted by a widespread rebellion, and trade in a great measure is paralyzed. In the United States the agonies of a commercial crisis are being endured, and although there is reason to hope that the worst has passed, it must be clear to all that commercial confidence will not be so readily restored as it has been torn down, and that it will perhaps be months before credit will be even partially reëstablished. It is therefore impossible to look upon the advance of the rate of interest and discount to-day but as a most grave and serious step. We cannot now ship goods ad libitum to India and America, and thus one great source of the available commercial capital of this country is materially narrowed; and although this is not an unmixed evil, it is one which will for the time seriously cripple the commercial world, and doubtless bring down many firms of standing and respectability. The general complaint is that money is not to be had; bankers are curtailing their advances and discounts as rapidly as prudence will permit, and preparing for the next phase in the aspect of commercial affairs. This is undoubtedly an uncomfortable situation, but much is to be hoped from the prudence of the mercantile community, and the facilities which it must be the desire of all bankers and capitalists to afford in the supply of capital for legitimate business. Seven per cent. is a giant in the path, and it will require almost unparalleled caution and consummate judgment on the part of the public to avoid the perils which are so thickly strewn on all sides. The "currency system" of the late Sir R. PEEL and the present Lord OVERSTONE is again on trial, and, so far as can be foreseen, with but little better chance of working than in the eventful year 1847, when, it will be remembered, it was found necessary to suspend its operation by the Government, after which affairs immediately improved. It is to be hoped, however, that the entire absence of anything like wild speculation will have the effect of preventing a repetition of such disasters as characterized that period, and in that there is good ground for looking to the future with something like confidence, although it is vain to suppose that no shock will be given to commercial credit, and no disasters accrue from the circumstances which influence the money market at this time.

From the London Chronicle, Oct. 13..

At a special meeting of the Court of Directors of the Bank of England, held early this morning, it was resolved to raise the rate of interest from 6 to 7 per cent., applicable alike to the discount of commercial bills and loans on stock. A measure of this kind was to be expected, and it is more to be wondered at that the restrictive policy was not adopted earlier. It, however, could not be delayed longer than to-day, as it was imperative on the Directors to check, if they could not stop, the heavy drain upon them. The applications which all last week and the week previously has been very heavy, were on Saturday extraordinarily so, amounting to one million sterling. With a reserve of notes of only about four millions to meet so great a drain, there was no help for them but to put up the rate. But it cannot stop even at the present quotation. We fully anticipate that they will have to make it 8 per cent. on or before Thursday next; nor can we hope that even this limit will be the maximum; it seems more likely to go to 10 per cent., and that very speedily, unless the Bank charter is abrogated. The mercantile interests do not know, and it would almost seem as if they cannot understand, the gross and ruinous system of finance under which they are subject to. They are constantly placed in the greatest jeopardy. Not until they have no longer credit to sustain themselves may we hope that they will have the faintest conception of the actual state of things. But it is in vain to call their attention to the subject. They prefer danger and no trouble to security and a little application to a subject dry enough, it may be, in the abstract, but one of the most interesting when it is rightly understood. The state of affairs in India, as we have repeatedly said, would lead to considerable difficulties among traders. We have made large shipments to India, and India's indebtedness to Manchester and Liverpool alone at this moment is something like £4,000,000, not one penny of which, it is to be feared, will be received. Remittances have virtually ceased. With America, a still worse state of things exist. Financial affairs have been seriously disturbed, and mercantile credit, though sound in itself, has suffered severely, the best houses having to give from 24 to 36 ℔ cent. for discounts. The accounts now to hand, however, are still worse; they announce a fall in the exchange to 100 for mercantile paper, and 105@106 for bankers' drafts. The effect of these is to create a much greater demand upon the market for gold, for any house in this country can dispatch a trusty agent to America, supplied with gold, to draw upon themselves, and realize the said 24@36 ℔ cent.; but the prospect, however, is oven greater—it is more like 50 ℔ cent. than anything else. The operation is a simple one, and a very profitable one. All that is wanted is the gold to do it with. It can and will be done by many houses here, and hence we shall be shipping gold to America. The state of affairs at home, however, is very unsatisfactory.

Trade is healthy enough in itself, and credit is sound enough, but no one can be considered strong enough to wholly withstand the influence of such a conjunction of things. Heavy losses have already been made, and many must follow. Sugar has gone down 14s. ℔ ton, and saltpetre 10s. ℔ ton, the latter in but a few days, which left speculators no time to turn themselves round to meet the collapse in the market, and difficulties meet us from both India and America, and unfortunately at a critical period of the year. The position of the Bank of England is as bad as it well can be to meet a turn of this kind; yet, to make matters worse, the Directors deliberately lend the India Company £1,000,000. A worse and more suicidal course to themselves and traders cannot well be imagined. It is inconceivable how they ever can have done such a thing. If the India Company is in want of money let it come into the open market with a loan, or, better still, let it obtain it in India. But no, in order to save themselves 1 or 2 ℔ cent. interest, they must derange the whole course of monetary affairs, and seriously cripple every trade. The Bank lends itself to this scheme, and we see the result—an advance in the charge for the discount of commercial paper of 1½ per cent. in the course of four days more, and the more than probability of its going higher in the course of a few days more. We must repeat our warning and our caution that the utmost caution is absolutely necessary. By boldly meeting and resolutely combating with our difficulties we can and may overcome them; whilst to deny their existence and neglect their workings, will entail calamitous results. As we before said, a monetary and commercial crisis cannot occur in America without our feeling it. Let us therefore meet it boldly, and we may be carried safely through. One cause of our present danger is the accursed state of our laws which regulate the currency. They are not sufficient to save us from threatened danger, nor to help us when it arrives. On the contrary, they rather magnify the evil. Will nothing but another crisis arouse the mercantile interest to a sense of the evils inflicted upon them by the Bank Charter Act? Its boasted supremacy and perfection was unable to control the course of events in 1847. Will it do so now, in 1857, the cycle of time which appears to come round with fatal precision to try our stability? We fear not; nay, we know that it cannot. The Bank in 1847 was obliged to apply to Government for help, and must do so again, unless it wilfully allows things to take their course, and ruin the whole country. But whilst professing confidence in their efficacy, the advocates of the retention of the Bank Charter will have to tacitly admit the inherent weakness of its laws, and ask for their temporary abrogation. In the meantime, whilst "Mercator" and his class are growing rich, the nation is growing poorer, and many totally shipwrecked on the sands of a severely stringent Money Market.

THE INDIAN MUTINIES.

Ninth Victory of General Havelock—Lucknow Safe—Active Preparations Before Delhi—Fight at Agra—The Mutinies Elsewhere—Return of Lord Elgin to China.

From the London Times, Oct. 12.

The following telegram was received at the Foreign Office, through the Admiralty, at 2:30 A. M. Oct. 11:

CAGLIARI, Oct. 9, 8:30 P. M.; MALTA, Oct 8—5 A. M.

The Bombay arrived at Suez on the evening of the 2d inst. Her dates are from Bombay, 17th September, and Aden, 26th September.

The following intelligence has been telegraphed from Suez to Alexandria by Vice-Consul WEST:

General HAVELOCK gained his ninth victory on the 16th of August, driving the rebels from a strong position near Bithoor, which they desperately defended. After the battle, he retired to Cawnpore, where he awaits reinforcements, before advancing to the relief of Lucknow, where the rebels were repelled with great loss, and the garrison are bravely holding out.

General OUTRAM arrived with strong reinforcements at Allahabad on the 1st of September, and expected to reach Cawnpore on the 9th.

The Dinapore mutineers have again been defeated by Major EYRE, near Sasseram, and are trying to make their way to Delhi.

Active preparations have been resumed before Delhi; and on the 26th of August, General NICHOLSON defeated the mutineers at Najafghar, (15 miles from Delhi,) capturing 13 guns and their camp baggage. Lieutenants LUMSDEN and GARRETT were killed. On the arrival of the siege train, which was expected on the 1st of September, it is said that an assault will be made on the city.

A small force which left Agra on the 21st of August, under the command of Major MONTGOMERY, defeated a body of insurgents near Allyghur, and put them to flight. Ensign MARSI and Mr. TANDY, volunteers, were killed.

The 10th Light Cavalry mutinied at Ferozepore on the 19th August, and murdered NELSON, the Veterinary Surgeon.

The 51st Native Infantry mutinied, at Peshawur, on the 28th August, but most of them were seized and will be summarily dealt with.

Herat was evacuated by the Persian troops on the 27th of July.

INTERESTING FROM FRANCE.

The Camp at Chalons—Imperial Visitors—Ball Races at the Bois de Boulogne—American Chapel in Paris—A Telegraphic Breach of Etiquette—American Physicians Killed in the Russian Service, &c.

From our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Thursday, Oct. 8, 1857.

The camp of Chalons is just now the centre of attraction for the fashionable world. The Empress and the Imperial Baby, the ladies of honor and the Marshals of France, have all taken up their residence at the camp, and are sharing the life of the soldier after the most approved military style. Even the Baby appears on parade in the uniform of his regiment, for he is inscribed as a common soldier in the ranks of the Imperial Guard, and the chroniclers say never makes his appearance thus without creating a great sensation. We can well believe it, since les enfants de troupe are always popular, especially if they carry a crown and are held in the arms of a charming mother. But the Little Corporal walks, shoulders his wooden musket and trails his sword in the dust like an old trooper. The Camp seems to be in ecstacies over the Pet.

It was thought that the Empress would stop at Chalons, and preparations had been made for lodging her at the Palace of the Prefect. But her Majesty preferred the camp and the bivouac to the luxuries of an in-door life. The camp accommodations are but poorly suited to modern tastes and modern fashions; but her Majesty, setting the example of abnegation, her fashionable attendants were obliged to "execute themselves," as they say at the Bourse, and to stow themselves away in a small tent, like so many sardines in a box. There was a rapid change operated in the forms of the ladies; but they all "played camp life," and did graciously what they could not avoid.

On Sunday last a grand review took place at the camp. The Emperor was attended by the Marshals PELISSIER, BOSQUET, MAGNAN and BARAGUAY D'HILLIERS, and by Lord ROKESBY, Commander of the Queen's Guards, and a few other foreign officers. The Empress was also on horseback, en amazone, attended by the Countesses MONTEBELLO and LABEDOYERE, and followed all the movements of the field. Marshals CASTELLAN and RAWDON have since arrived at the Camp, and this completes the list of Marshals, all of whom have witnessed the operations of the army under His Majesty's command. It has been remarked with more or less of surprise that the number of foreign officers who have visited the camp has been very limited.

The last grand field exercise at the camp takes place to-day, and this evening the Empress returns to Paris. The Emperor will not long delay his return, and in a few days the camp will be raised. It is pretended that on the 15th of this month NAPOLEON is to meet the King of Prussia and the Emperor of Austria at Berlin, and that following these imperial interviews Congress is to meet at Paris to consider a plan of reduction of all the standing armies of Europe. All this is possible, but not probable.

The first of the Fall Races at the Bois de Boulogne, near Paris, took place on Sunday last, and brought together an immense concourse of people. It was the first Autumn day over the new course of Longchamps, and this course, so much admired in the Spring, has lost none of its attractions. It is true that, owing to the mildness of the season, we are enjoying a second foliage as green as the first, but the grounds were too fresh in the Spring to show all the beauty they were destined to possess. The French, chop-fallen over the Waterloo-defeat of Chantilly, did not show much animation in the betting circles. The races, however, were well-contested, and the day's sport was by no means an inferior one. The principal owners of studs on the ground were the Count DE MORNY, the Prince MARC DE BEAUVAN, the Count DE LAGRANGE, Madame LATACHE DE FAY, the Count DE ROEDERER, the Count DE CARS, M. LUPIN, M. MOSSELMAN, M. FASQUEL. No English horses were engaged for this day, but on Sunday next several horses from the other side of the channel are expected to run.

The lion of the day at the races was the Arab boy of M. JULES FAVRE. You will recollect the late trial at Algiers of Capt. DOINEAU and nineteen Arabs of distinction, for murder, and that the French Captain was condemned to the guillotine and the Arabs to the galleys. M. JULES FAVRE, the distinguished lawyer of Paris, defended the criminals, and on his return to Paris brought with him an interesting boy of twelve years of age, the son of one of the chiefs whom he defended. It was only on Saturday last that the high Court of Appeals at Paris, (the Court of Cassation,) rejected the appeal of the prisoners for a new trial; but the boy did not seem to be affected by this new decision against his father, and appeared that day on the field, dressed in a rich white silk bournous, and mounted on a fleet Arab horse. He galloped from side to side of the field with the fleetness of the wind, and the servant who followed him or tried to follow him on a less high mettled horse, was totally exhausted with his day's work. The dexterity with which the urchin managed his horse was the envy of many an old cavalier.

☞ Last January a decree of the Municipal Government came into force, which compelled an entrance fee to be paid at the door of the Exchange. The ostensible object of this tax was to repress stock gambling by the poor, but the real object was revenue. Around the Bourse there is a small square covered with trees and graveled, and on this ground crowds collect every day, and carry on their petty jobbing, by means of runners to the interior, with almost the same facility as before the institution of the tax. The Government, determined to avail themselves of this ground and the revenue it may bring them, have commenced to fence in the square, with the intention of fixing the limits of approach to the Bourse at the extremities of the square. The people, deranged by this new decision, have concluded to contest this right before the tribunals, and a general cry has been raised against the measure, even in those journals friendly to the Government. It is believed that the Government will receive a check on this question.

A little more than a year ago the Americans commenced raising funds for the structure of a chapel for Protestant service in this City. A portion of the funds was subscribed, and already the chapel is terminated on the exterior. It is located in the Rue de Berri, near the Avenue of the Champs Elysées, (very much too far out of town, like the Legation, which is neighbor to it,) and is a neat stone structure with a Gothic front, but with a strikingly plain exterior on its sides. It would rank in point of size and cost with a first-class New-England school-house, and curious enough—curious in relation to its cost, but not curious in relation to church habits—lacks very much of being paid for.

How often must it be repeated that France is the country of irrealized ideas? All the girls of a certain parish in one of the departments lately projected and put into operation a system of marriage lottery from which they hope to draw immense results. Each girl pays into a common fund ten francs per year—a sum which the commonest laboring girl can afford; and as the parish numbers many hundreds of girls, perhaps thousands, the annual purse will be a very handsome one. This purse is to be divided at the end of the year in two to four equal portions, according to the number of subscribers, which are to be given to two to four girls as dots or marriage portions, to enable them to get husbands; for in France, as you know, marriage is next to impossible, unless the girls have a more or less bulky douceur for the husbands. The happy ones are to be drawn by lot. If those who draw the lots fail to get married within a year, the money passes to others who have opportunities of getting married. After marriage, the lady is held bound to contribute her yearly installment to the fund for a period of ten years, and to use all her endeavors to obtain husbands for those who remain single. This is a beautiful scheme on paper, but we fear totally inapplicable in practice.

The Cannes telegraph committed an indiscretion the other day which is totally inexplicable. It said to the amused Parisians: "His Imperial Highness the Prince NAPOLEON has arrived here. The health of Mlle. RACHEL is improved." And that was all. This was a juxtaposition which did not surprise any one who was in the secret of the relations existing between these individuals, but they were rather startled at the naiveté of the telegraph. If it had only made to intervene between the two names a word about the weather, or the crops, or the health of Mlle. RACHEL'S neighbor Lord BROUGHAM, or any thing, in fine, the announcement would not have seemed so crude. But the telegraph is an American invention and does not stand upon etiquette. It is at the same time gratifying to know that the health of the illustrious actress is ameliorated; but it is doubtful whether this amelioration will be of long duration.

A Russian journal announces the number of medical men killed in her service in the late war at 382. Of these ten were Americans.

MALAKOFF.

VIRGINIA POLITICS.

Letter from Senator Hunter upon the Kansas Question and General Politics.

From the Charlottesville (Va.) Jeffersonian.

LLOYD'S, Essex Co., Va., Friday, Oct. 16, 1857.

TO HON. SHELTON F. LEAKE.—Dear Sir: I received on yesterday your letter propounding to me certain interrogatories, to which, without further delay, I proceed to reply. They are in substance nearly the same, with the questions upon which the Enquirer for some time past, has been demanding my answers. But to these last I have not replied, because they were either accompanied with threats, or what were so considered, which made an answer on my part, inconsistent with self-respect, or else they were founded upon my presumed responsibility for the editorials of certain newspapers within, and without the State of Virginia, which were not only not authorized to speak for me, but which claimed no such authority. I was to be held responsible for the course of newspapers, unless I came before the public with a criticism of their course and a disclaimer of all sympathy with them; a responsibility, which I shall never acknowledge expressly, or impliedly, by any act of mine. To admit such a responsibility, would place it in the power of any third person who chose to impute to me a sympathy with the course of any newspaper within, or without the State, to call me out in a public criticism of its course upon any question of morals or politics which might be in discussion, or else fix upon me the charge of concurring in the views of that paper. No power could force upon me the office of censor of the public press. I certainly shall not assume it voluntarily. When any paper claims authority to speak for me, then it may be the time to question me in regard to it, but not before.

But to proceed with the answers to your interrogatories, I have to say, first, that the imputation of hostility, on my part, towards the administration of Mr. BUCHANAN, is founded upon nothing that I have neither said or done. I voted for him as President, and not only entertain no feeling of hostility towards him, but I wish him success. He has only to carry out the principles of the Democratic party, as we understand them in Virginia, to command my cordial support. These, so far as applicable, will afford the test by which I shall judge his administration, and support or oppose its acts, as they conform to, or depart from these principles. Nor shall I be disposed to apply that test in any captious, or unkind spirit, but as justly and fairly as I can. More I could not say for any administration or man. I never would commit myself to support unconditionally, the future acts of any man, but I will judge them as they arise, to sustain them when I believe they are right, and to oppose them when I think they are wrong. My opinions upon all the great political issues, may be known through my votes and speeches, to those who feel enough of interest in them, to look into my past course, and these will afford the best evidence of the tests which I shall be likely to apply, in judging of the conduct of public affairs. Whilst I remain in the Senate of the United States, I shall stand there as the representative of the principles and interests of my State, so far as I can understand them, and in the pursuit of these objects, I should not scruple to differ, if necessary, with any administration. In saying this, it may be perhaps fair to add, that I hope and expect to be able to support Mr. BUCHANAN'S Administration in the main. Entire concurrence in the views of any man it would be too much to hope or expect.

In answer to the other interrogatory which you propose as to the conduct of Governor WALKER in Kansas, I have little hesitation in saying that I disapprove. The Kansas-Nebraska act was passed under the hope that this, the last of the territorial questions, involving the subject of Slavery, might be settled upon some common ground, where a party could be rallied from the North and the South, the East and the West, strong enough to defend the Constitution against the assaults of its enemies, and to administer the Government justly upon other than purely sectional ideas. To rally a party which might be able to maintain the Union upon constitutional principles, was an object of high political importance, and justified some sacrifices of feeling, and even of interest. Accordingly, the bill was not such as would have been framed by the delegates of either section, if it had been submitted to them alone. Many, perhaps most of the Southern men, (of whom I was one) believed that property in slaves was as much entitled to the protection of law in the Territories of the United States, as property in any thing else; but whilst the Northern friends of the Kansas act would not concede this, they agreed to unite in repealing the Missouri restriction so as to remove the ban under which the domestic institutions of the South had been placed by Federal legislation. Accordingly, a bill was passed upon the principle of non-intervention, in regard to Slavery, so far as the General Government was concerned, and which left that whole subject within the control of the people of these Territories, when they should apply for admission as States. This, although not all that we thought the South entitled to, was a great advance upon the old order of things, so far as she was concerned, because it removed an unjust and odious discrimination against her domestic institutions from the statute-book—a moral triumph which was of vast importance to the South and to the institution of Slavery itself. Nor could the North object to a bill which merely carried out a principle by which it had recently gained so largely in the series of acts denominated as the Compromise Measures. To all it ought to have been a subject of congratulation that a common ground had been found where a party might be rallied from all sections of the country to administer the Government justly, and without sacrificing the constitutional rights of any portion of the Union. The sole hope of accomplishing so happy a result depended upon submitting this question of Slavery to the people of these Territories, when they came to form their Constitutions as States, without interference of any sort on the part of the General Government. With the decision of the people themselves, so far as the character of the new States was concerned, the Democratic Party of all sections declared they would be satisfied. To fulfill, then, the conditions of this agreement, it was all-important that there should be no interference on the part of the General Government, either through its Legislative or Executive influence. Any such interference was calculated to dissatisfy the one section or the other. Under such circumstances, it was in my opinion, improper, for the highest executive officer in the Territory the Governor of Kansas, to attempt to influence the decision of the people of that Territory upon this question of Slavery. Such an interference on the part of any branch of the Federal Government, was inconsistent with the principle of the Kansas-Nebraska act. Neither do I recognize his authority to declare that "if they (the Convention) do not appoint a fair and impartial mode, by which a majority of the actual, bona fide resident settlers of Kansas, shall vote through the instrumentality of impartial judges, I will join you in all lawful opposition to their doings, and the President and Congress will reject their Constitution." If the Convention itself was legally constituted and elected, the question of submitting their work to the people for ratification, was one of which that body had jurisdiction alone, unless indeed the act which called them in to being, had required a final ratification by the people. The practice of States applying for admission, as I understand, has been in both ways. Nor has the power of the Convention to determine this question for itself ever been controverted, heretofore, so far as I am informed. The Convention of Kansas, if legally constituted, has all the powers of any other Convention to form a State Constitution, and if Congress can limit this power in one respect, it may in all. If Congress can reject a State Constitution for the manner in which the Convention has exercised its undoubted powers, why not for the matter also of that Constitution, even though it may be Republican in its form of Government? or, if the Governor of a Territory may attempt to overawe a convention of its people in the exercise of its powers in one respect, why not in another? With regard to the abstract propriety of the particular recommendations of Governor WALKER, I do not feel called upon to speak. That is a matter for the decision of the Convention itself, with which I ought not to interfere. The abstract propriety of these recommendations depends upon circumstances, of which the people of Kansas, acting through their Convention, are the best judges. To them I leave it as their own affair. As to which course would conduct most to their peace and a fair settlement of the question, I should require a greater knowledge of the actual state of affairs in that Territory to enable me to decide.

With these answers to your interrogatories, I might here close this letter, except that I infer you desire to know how far my opinion in regard to Governor WALKER'S conduct may effect my course towards the Administration. What are the precise views of the President upon these questions, I know not; I await their development in the regular course. But should he differ with me upon these matters, I do not see how any practical issue can arise between him and those of his friends who entertain other opinions in regard to Governor WALKER'S course. I say, I do not see how any practical issue could arise out of this matter between the President and those who might differ with him in regard to these things, because I do not believe for a moment that he would aid in an attempt to reject the State, if Kansas should apply for admission, merely because its Convention did not choose to submit the Constitution to the people for ratification. Upon such a question as this, in regard to the right of Congress to limit the power of a people to form their State Constitution according to their own pleasure, provided it be Republican in its character, I should think there could be no division of opinion amongst the members of the Democratic Party in any section of the Union. There could not be, if they remain true to what I understand as their profession of faith. To establish the great principles of the equal rights of the States to the enjoyment of the Territories of the United States, which no act of Federal legislation can constitutionally abridge or destroy, and of the right of the people of each State to determine the character of their own domestic institutions without prejudice to their claim of admission into the Union, the Democratic Party has submitted to losses and sacrifices which could only have been justified by the successful accomplishment of a great object. To obtain a common ground upon which all might rally for the defence of the Constitution and the peace of the country against the enemies of both, did constitute such an object. And now that the position has been conquered, after so arduous a struggle, who supposes that the Democratic Party would volunteer a retrograde movement, and renounce the fruits of a hard-won victory? To abandon either of these positions now, by a retrograde movement, would be an act of felo de se in the party, and not merely a folly, but a crime for which posterity would never forgive it. For these reasons, I do not believe that the Democratic Party, or the President whom it has chosen, will aid in any attempt to restrict the power of the people of Kansas, acting through their Convention, to form a constitution according to their own pleasure, both in manner and substance, provided it be republican in its character.

Having now answered fully your interrogatories, I need proceed no further; but as you are kind enough to say that you question me not because you doubted me yourself, but to save me from misconstruction by others, I feel that I ought not to conclude without thanking you for your generous motives. To those who are disposed to misconstrue me, I have only to say that, if the past course of one who has served the State in a public capacity so long as I have, affords no sufficient guaranty as to his future conduct, it is idle to seek for further security in professions of faith. My past course affords the best evidence of my principles of public action, and these are the tests by which, as an honest man, I am bound to judge every Administration. If, therefore, I should differ from an Administration because it dissented from these principles, I should be blamed, if blameable at all, not for the act of differing with a President, but because of the false principles by which I am to judge him; so that it is by these that I am to be tried, after all. It is true, that when new questions arise, one may be fairly and properly questioned as to his opinions. But what is there new here? The principles of the Kansas-Nebraska act, by which I have been just testing Governor WALKER'S conduct, and the right of the people, acting through their Convention, to form a Constitution of Republican character, according to their own pleasure, without prejudice to their claim of admission as a State in the Union, have all been discussed heretofore, by myself and others, far more fully than would be consistent with the limits of this letter. Nor have I expressed any opinion in regard to those questions, to which I have not been committed long since. If, then, I repeat sentiments which I have before declared, you will excuse me, as I do it in deference to your request. Very respectfully and truly yours,

R. M. T. HUNTER.

General Emancipation Throughout the Dutch Dependencies.

From the St. Thomas Tidende.

It seems that Holland is at last resolved to follow the example of her neighbors in abolishing Slavery in her colonies in the West Indies.

We read in the Curacaosche Courant, of the 22d inst., an official publication of the Home Government preparing the inhabitants for the emancipation of slaves in Curaçao, Bonaire, Aruba, St. Eustatius and Saba.

It is pleasing to observe that, while other governments have been the first to adopt this measure, Holland, it would seem, will be the only one that will pay a fair equivalent to the slaveholder for his slave.

The indemnification fixed is as follows: In the islands of Curaçao, Bonaire, Aruba and St. Eustatius, the amount of 50 francs (about $20) will be given for a slave under the age of 5 years; from 5 upwards unto the age of 10 years, 75 francs, ($30;) from 10 years upwards unto the age of 15 years, 225 francs, ($90;) from 15 years upwards unto the age of 20 years, 325 francs, ($130;) from 20 years upwards unto the age of 25 years, 475 francs, ($190;) from 25 years upwards unto the age of 35 years, 500 francs, ($200;) from 35 years upwards unto the age of 40 years, 450 francs, ($180;) from 40 years upwards unto the age of 45 years, 325 francs, ($130;) from 45 years upwards unto the age of 55 years, 200 francs, ($80;) from 55 years upwards unto the age of 65 years, 75 francs, ($30;) from 55 years upward, 50 francs, ($20.)

On the Island of Saba, for a slave unto the age of 5 years, 50f. ($20) will be given; from five years upwards unto the age of 10 years, 60f. ($24;) from 10 years upwards to the age of 15 years, 175f. ($70;) from 15 years upwards unto the age of 20 years, 275f. ($110;) from 20 years upwards unto the age of 25 years, 375f. ($150;) from 25 years upwards unto the age of 35 years, 405f. ($162;) from 35 years upwards unto the age of 40 years, 350f. ($140;) from 40 years upwards unto the age of 45 years, 250f. ($100;) from 45 years upwards unto the age of 50 years, 150f. ($60;) from 50 years upwards unto the age of 55 years, 60f. ($24;) from 55 years upwards, 50f. ($20.)

For sick slaves, a reduced price will be paid, which is to be fixed after the slave has been examined by two physicians, one appointed by Government and the other by the owner thereof.

No indemnification will be given for slaves infected with leprosy or any other contaminating diseases, for runaway slaves who have been absent more than two years, or for those condemned to hard work and whose punishment will only expire after four years.

Slaves emancipated by Government are subject to the vigilance of functionaries paid by Government for that purpose, and bearing the name of district masters. The emancipated slaves are obliged to assume a family name, which will go over to their children. All those from the age of 20 to 50 years of age can be called upon by turns to work for the State which will pay them reasonable wages. All this will be arranged in such a manner as to insure general satisfaction.

All emancipated slaves are obliged to contribute to the formation of a fund destined to pay back to the State the expenses of their emancipation. They are to enjoy religious instruction, and schools will be provided for their children by the Government. The emissaries for that purpose will also be appointed by Government.

Whilst their privileges as citizens will in some cases be defined, they will enjoy the same rights and privileges as the rest of the inhabitants.

All quarrels which may arise between themselves or between them and the rest of the inhabitants, will be decided by the District Master superintending the quarter in which the disputants reside.

Payment will be made by Government immediately after the delivery is made in bonds on the Colonial chest, or on the National Treasury.

Children of emancipated parents born after the proclamation of this law are free, and not subject to the restrictions to which their emancipated parents are under; and they are to remain under the control of their parents to the age of twelve years.

The date for the emancipation of the slaves is to be fixed by the Home Government.

HARD TIMES IN THE CITY.

Decrease of Freight and Travel on Railroads and Steamboat Lines.

CAMDEN AND AMBOY RAILROAD TRANSPORTATION LINE.

Through freights, to the South and West, of dry goods and merchandise had fallen off during October, as compared with the three weeks of the same month last year, about 20 per cent., as near as they can judge in anticipation of the monthly accounts. The freights inward, for the first eighteen days of October, have fallen off about 15 per cent. In the passenger business, the receipts for October will be about equal to last year. The month of September, 1856, produced more, by about a thousand dollars, than the same month of 1857.

The closing of the Delaware and Raritan Canal in Winter throws a large amount of freights upon the road. The aggregate receipts for September, 1857, in the different departments, amounted to an excess of $40,000 over the corresponding month of last year.

CENTRAL RAILROAD, NEW-JERSEY.

There has been a large decrease in the amount of freight over this road since the hard times, the receipts having fallen off nearly two-thirds. There is no Philadelphia passenger travel over this road.

LONG ISLAND RAILROAD.

The President and Superintendent of the Long Island Railroad reports a diminution in the freight and passenger receipts of the road for the month of October, thus far, of about 33 per cent., as compared with the same time last year. During the first week the difference was not so marked, but the last two weeks it has been more apparent. The farmers are holding back their produce; they watch the market very closely. An increase in prices occasions a general movement, and all are anxious to get their produce forward. At present, however, the money pressure prevents them from moving. The crops on the Island have been better than an average, except potatoes, which fall far below. Hay and corn have been good. The September business of the railroad was about equal to that of last year. The passenger business has fallen of somewhat, but not in proportion to the freight.

NEW-YORK AND ERIE RAILROAD.

Thus far during Octocer the local travel of this Road has been about the same as last year. The way freight has also been good. The through business both ways has fallen off, that bound westward about one-half, and eastward something less, scarcely less than last year. The farmers have been holding back their produce, but during the last week there has been a large increase in the arrival of produce. During the panic it was almost impossible for the best dealers to buy anything, as the farmers would not receive any kind of money but specie; since the suspension of the Banks, however, there is a decided improvement, and produce begins to move again.

STONINGTON LINE.

The falling off in freights going and coming is from 30 to 40 per cent. for October. This is owing to the general suspension of work at the manufactories in Rhode Island and Massachusetts, and to the backwardness of manufacturers to send their goods forward until the times become more settled. The September business was as good as usual. The travel continues about on an average with the corresponding month of last year. On the Eastern lines October is one of the best months of the year.

BAY STATE OR FALL RIVER LINE.

Freights have declined during the three weeks of October about two-thirds. The travel has also decreased, though not in the ratio of the freight. The factories of Fall River have all stopped—the iron mills, linen factories, cotton mills and calico-print works—and some two or three thousand persons are deprived of work in consequence. There being no goods manufactured, and none sold, there are none to be shipped, and the boats must go comparatively empty. The Empire State will be completed and ready to come off the Dry Dock on Tuesday next, and take her place in the line.

NEW-YORK AND SAVANNAH LINE OF STEAMERS.

Freights have dropped off one-half as compared with ordinary times in months past. Passengers are mostly those going home to the South. Great difficulty exists in transacting business, on account of exchanges. One gentleman whose income is said to be not less than $60,000 a year was not able to pay his passage home, as he could not get a draft negotiated for the amount needed for his personal expenses, and paid his passage by a draft on himself. They expect more activity in both freights and passengers in November.

PHILADELPHIA CANAL LINES—DISPATCH AND SWIFTSURE.

Freights, in October, have declined about 30 per cent., as compared with August and September. They are endeavoring to keep up a daily line, a boat leaving regularly every day at 12 o'clock, as heretofore, with few exceptions.

COMMERCIAL STEAMBOAT COMPANY—PROVIDENCE PROPELLERS.

This line has been doing a fair business until the middle of September, but freights have gone down nearly half since the business depressions have occurred. They do not look for a movement in merchandise until about the 1st of January.

SCREW-STEAMER LINE TO NORWICH AND NEW-LONDON.

Freights have decreased about one-half during October. The Company run five boats, but have hauled one off for the present. They all go with light freights.

CROMWELL'S LINE OF STEAMERS.

The line to Baltimore has experienced a diminution of 50 per cent. in freight, and that to Charleston and Savannah has lost 33 per cent. To Portland, where there is a different description of trade, there is the usual amount doing. To the South, travel is now good, on account of Southerners returning home.

SANDFORD'S LINE OF STEAMERS.

This line via Cape May to Philadelphia, feels the general depression in their business, which has suffered a considerable, decrease in freights, amounting to a fifth. There is no travel this way, except in Summer, going to Cape May and Philadelphia.

PEOPLES' LINE OF STEAMERS.

This line to Albany and Troy brings a large portion of the butter, cheese and eggs to this market. The falling off in down freight of this description is about one-third. Thus far there is no speculative movement in produce, and business is regular. The upward freight is as light as it has ever been in mid-Summer, instead of being, as is usual at this time, the most busy season of the year. As compared with last year it is very light. The decrease in travel is also much greater than usual at this season.

MERCHANTS' LINE OF STEAMERS.

This line runs two boats. The downward freight is a third less than usual, and the upward one-half. Passengers also are very scarce; and as compared with former seasons are fewer by two-thirds.

NORWICH AND WORCESTER LINE.

Steamers Commonwealth and Connecticut. The agent says this line is doing a very satisfactory business, considering the depression of the times; for two weeks past freight has been light, but the travel has been very fair. They have a short steamboat-route, and boats which require a comparatively moderate amount of coal The manufactories along their line of travel have not yet suspended to any extent.

INDEPENDENT LINE TO NEWPORT, PROVIDENCE AND BOSTON.

The agent represents the freight business by the Governor on this route as steadily increasing, notwithstanding the pressure. The three weeks of October were better, he says, than September, which he refers to a reduction in the tariff of charges. Passengers also have increased, the fare having lately been reduced to $1 50 to Providence and $2 50 to Boston.

Meeting of Hardware Dealers on the Present Embarrassments of Trade.

A general meeting of the merchants of this City engaged in the hardware trade, was held on Saturday afternoon, at the Astor House, by call of the Executive Committee of the Hardware Dealers' Board of Trade. The object, as defined in the circular issued, was the consideration "of the time of credits, as at present allowed, and other subjects connected with the present embarrassments of trade." Nearly two hundred persons connected with that importan branch of merchandise were present, and the meeting was organized by the appointment of Mr. EDWARD CORNER, President of the Board, to the Chair. He briefly announced the purpose of the meeting, but said that after a conference with the Committee, it had been thought advisable that the important business which had called them together, should not then be entered upon, but that the present meeting should be preliminary to another to be held hereafter. He proposed the appointment of a committee to report upon the course to be taken to alleviate the difficulties under which the hardware trade was now laboring.

The Chairman was followed by Mr. QUINCY, who dwelt at some length on the causes of the present financial crisis. The entire basis on which trade had heretofore been conducted was wrong. The credit system was miserably wrong. The banking system was wrong. By these combined causes we have been plunged into this monetary embarrassment. The system of giving long credits must be abandoned.

Mr. FRANCIS MANY thought that the present meeting might proceed to action. There was no necessity to make it merely a preliminary meeting. True, there might have been a larger attendance, but he doubted whether more members of the trade would attend at any subsequent meeting. He proposed, therefore, that a Committee of Five should be appointed to prepare resolutions and present them for the action of that meeting.

In reference to the long credit system, Mr. WETMORE remarked that he had been in the habit of selling to the trade at four months, and to other parties at six months. He had no fault to find with that plan, for with him it worked admirably. A general adoption of the practice, he was sure, would be advantageous to the interests of the trade.

Mr. A. VAN BUREN moved that a Committee on Resolutions should be appointed, to report at a future meeting. The motion was seconded, and adopted, the appointment of a Committee being left to the Chair.

Previous to the appointment of this Committee Mr. LIVINGSTON desired to make a few remarks. He wished the Committee to suggest in their resolutions the adoption of a four months credit system. If New-York so engaged itself, other cities, as a matter of course, would fall into the arrangement. He especially called upon those hardware merchants present, who were engaged in the Southern trade to urge the adoption of this change in the credit system, and desired that the views of such members should be at once expressed to the meeting, so that the Committee when appointed, might be fully advised as to the opinion of the meeting in the matter.

The Chairman replied that the difficulties in regard to long credits were not so material as the time given to the dealers. It seemed to him that traders wanted confidence in each other. We were deficient in courage, and if that spirit were not soon infused into the community, we should become a nation of bankrupts.

Mr. D. C. GREEN moved the appointment of a Committee to correspond with the hardware dealers of other cities, especially of Philadelphia, Boston and Baltimore, for the purpose of insuring their coöperation, and securing a delegation from the trade of each city, to attend and give their opinions at the next meeting. A Committee of one was appointed.

On motion, the Chairman then appointed the Committee on Resolutions, consisting of Messrs. Charles Norton, Charles Bilven, A. Ward, R. P. Bruff and Charles Vandervoort. To this Committee, the Chairman himself was subsequently added.

The meeting then adjourned to Friday next at 3 P. M.

The Pawnbrokers' Offices.

The pawnbroking establishments of the City are ordinarily the index of the emptiness of the popular pocket. Fast young men, it is true, even in the most flourishing times, are wont to consign their watches, rings, shirt-pins, and sometimes articles of lesser value, such as superfluous coats or vests, to the temporary care of their mother's or father's brother, to cover the expenses of a team to High Bridge, Stryker's Bay, or some other "rapid" locality, with the additional cost of a champagne supper, which pretty girls require when they get there. Such exuberant geniuses exemplify nothing but their own prodigality and absurdity, and usually, before they terminate their career, become isolated from their fellow-creatures in a certain stone building at Sing Sing. Passing them by, without further allusion, the necessities of the times, we repeat, are always reflected, as in "a mirror held up to nature," in the pawnbroker's shop.

The times are hard, but they will be harder yet. The run upon the pawnbrokers has not properly commenced, as it shortly will, when the frost sets in, and the streets get their first coating of snow. But enough of the future is already indicated in the aspect of affairs which the pawnbrokers' counter even now presents. Our reporter dropped into some of these establishments yesterday, and made inquiries. What he heard and what he saw are worthy of a passing remark.

In the first place, the pawnbrokers and their clerks not being disposed to be very communicative, he had to listen to the customers' applications, entreaties and complaints. "Ah, won't you lend me more than one dollar for these new pants of my husband's? They are Winter pants, which he bought to keep him warm in the cold weather, and he gave five dollars for them in Fulton-street, and he has never once worn them, only, you see, he has been three weeks out of work, and the children want bread?" The clerk so addressed refuses to listen any further, and turns away to another applicant. "How much for this watch?" "Twenty dollars?" "Nonsense, eight," and he passes on to a widow who has brought two blankets to pawn. She modestly asks two dollars on them. They are not quite new, but they are warm and comfortable, and were not bought a year ago for less than ten or twelve dollars—large English blankets. The clerk offers her a dollar and she takes it. She and her children will shiver this Winter for want of those blankets, which will lie useless on the pawnbroker's shelves.

And this is only the beginning of sorrow.

For we saw not alone superfluous articles,—of which the number was legion,—brought in, such as jewelry, Summer clothes, books, musical instruments, fancy ware, anything that could be spared, but goods which the Winter renders imperative,—such as overcoats, thick shawls, blankets, as aforesaid, counterpanes, female flannel under-garments. And they came rapidly, brought by women with an expression of care upon their features that is not ordinarily seen in women of their class,—wives of able-bodied mechanics. And we thought too surely the coming Winter was to be a terrible one.

In view of the forthcoming crisis, (for talk as we will of the "crisis," we have not seen it yet,) we may anticipate that many a worthy home this Winter will be half-stripped of the cherished things on which the good wife prided herself. The pawnbrokers will lend on them one-tenth, in some cases one-twentieth, of their value. And good times must return in earnest next Spring and Summer, if they are ever tobe restored to the possession of their impoverished owners.

The indication already is, that mechanics with reasonable incomes have not husbanded their resources. They thronged the pawnbrokers' offices with their tools. Men, suddenly thrown out of employment, should not pledge their tools first. And yet there is not a pawnbroker in the City, who will not say that tools are generally parted with before trinkets. Is there a hesitation on the part of the husband to deprive the wife of her rings and brooches, and would he rather part with his chisels, planes, and other bread-winning instruments than ask her to resign the ornaments with which in favorable times he has adorned her? By no means. But there is that perversity and inexplicable crookedness in human nature, that leads many a man, as soon as work falls him, to rid himself of the implements with which his work is carried on. As though the mariner in a storm should cast aside the compass.

In five of the principal pawnbrokers' establishments, on Friday, our reporter saw mechanics parting with the tools by which their bread was earned, simply on the plea that they were out of work, and that they were not likely to resume employment before the Spring. Nobody asked them how they intended to redeem their tools in the Spring, and, probably, they had not anticipated the matter. We pitied their want of foresight and passed on.

We passed on to observe spectacles that we willingly would not have seen, and which every day of the forthcoming season will render more painful.

Women pledging their wedding rings. Even the wants of the discharged workmen, unless they have been very improvident, cannot have brought their wives to such an alternative against want.

Workingmen pawning their silver watches. When men are out of work, it is of little consequence to them what time it is in the morning before daylight.

The poorest people of all the community—those who are always paupers, and who habitually frequent the pawnbroker's establishment—pawning their children's clothes. If they do that "in the green tree, what shall be done in the dry?" Where will the children be before the Winter is over?

Business Out of the City.

The pinching times are producing still more serious results in the Eastern manufacturing districts. At Lowell, all the mills have reduced the number of working days; some have stopped altogether; others have cut off one-half the work. The Hamilton Company, which has 48,000 spindles, now runs 13,000, and works five days in the week. The Appleton Mill runs two-thirds of its works five days; the Lawrence has stopped 650 out of 1,[illegible]; Suffolk runs half the works; the T[illegible] stopped 374 out of 780 looms; the Mer[illegible] stopped its sheeting-mill; all the mills on [illegible] have ceased work; the Massachusetts stopp[illegible] 1,227 looms, and works four days; the Pres[illegible] four days; the Lavell has stopped all [illegible] mills, and will reduce wages in the oth[illegible] ments.

Fall River has stopped all its cotton-mi[illegible] works, linen-mills, and calico-works, throwi[illegible] employment between two and three thousand

All the factories owned and run by A. [illegible] SPRAGUE, of Providence, were stopped o[illegible] night, throwing 3,000 persons out of employ[illegible]

The appearance of things in the Blackston[illegible] n Massachusetts, is not quite so blue. [illegible] woolen-mill in Millville is running full tim[illegible] & Scorr intend to remove, presently, to t[illegible] mills in Oxford. The mills of BRADFORD & [illegible] Waterford, run full time. All the mills in [illegible] ville, however, will be compelled to sus[illegible] rations.

In Philadelphia, the residents of Spring [illegible] have entered into a combination to refrain [illegible] use of all articles of food for which specula[illegible] exorbitant prices.

Work has been suspended on a part of the [illegible] ton and Big Sandy Railroad in Kentucky.

We noticed, a day or two since, the call [illegible] at the West. A letter has reached us from [illegible] of Rockville, Indiana, requesting that publi[illegible] be given to the fact that good servant-gir[illegible] work are in great demand in that section. [illegible] help is very scarce, and, in order to obtain t[illegible] sary supplies, money would be advanced, [illegible] parties in New-York, to pay the fare of th[illegible] will go. Our correspondent offers to provid[illegible] for ten.

How the Hard Times Affect Tax-Payers.

The following table clearly shows how the tax-payers are affected by the tightness in the money market. Last year, taxes began to be received on the 16th of September; this year, the 7th of September was the first day for their receipt. The difference between the receipts of 42 days in 1856 and 1857 is $868,662 in favor of last year. After the 1st of November, one per cent. will be added to all unpaid taxes; but when money is worth four per cent. per month, that inducement to call and settle is not very strong:

A Plan of Charity Proposed.

All who know anything of our city at the present time, are aware of the fearful danger and suffering which especially threaten one class—the unemployed sewing girls. Thousands of these—seamstresses, bookfolders, cigar-makers, flower-makers, and others, industrious, virtuous girls, are utterly out of work, and are not likely to have any during this winter. What is to become of them under their pressing temptations from want and hunger!

There seems to be but one natural remedy, and that is, to carry this surplus labor off to places where it is in demand.

The difficulty hitherto has been that there was no suitable society or organization which would undertake to connect the vast healthy demand at the West for girls' labor, and this over-supp y in our own city.

The Children's Aid Society, in view of the present distress, is about to undertake this responsible work on a scale as considerable as the means which the public will supply. It has much of the requisite machinery, agents, &c. No new organization will be needed. If the means only be generously afforded, numbers of these girls, in a short time, can be started for good places in the West. The Society does not propose to undertake this for more than three or four months, during the greatest pressure of the season.

Who is ready to aid in making this plan efficient by his own individual contributions? The Society is not willing to attempt the enterprise, without, at least $300 contributed for this especial object. As the season is far advanced whatever is done should be done at once.

Donations or subscriptions can be sent either to JNO. L. MASON, No. 43 Trinity Buildings, or to J. E. WILLIAMS, Metropolitan Bank, or to this office.

C. L. BRACE, Secretary Childrens' Aid Society, No. 11 Clinton Hall, Asterplace.

PUGILISM IN THE HARBOR—A RING FIGHT ON DECK—ARREST OF THE PARTIES.—The ship Webster, Captain LAWRENCE, from Liverpool, with emigrants, arrived Friday night. During the voyage it is reported there has been much ill-usage of the crew, and even of the passengers, by the officers of the ship, and a bad state of feeling has existed. One passenger was pointed out with two black eyes, who had received a beating from somebody. Saturday morning, the boatswain, it is alleged, challenged any man to fight him, and he found a customer. The sailors formed a ring, and the parties battered each other to their heart's content, the boatswain getting the worst of it. SMITH, one of the men, who thought the fight had gone far enough, attempted to separate the combatants, when he was immediately knocked on the head with a slung-shot, as he alleges, by one of the officers. Hereupon, a kind of free fight began, in which slung-shots, marlinspikes and scrapers were used. The ship was in the stream, and the Captain was ashore. At the end of the performance three sailors were arrested by Officers WYNKOOP and others, of 1st Precinct, the second mate pointing out the men most obnoxious to him, and they were committed by Justice CONNOLLY for examination. The boatswain is badly cut about the head. The names of the accused are SMITH, SHIELDS and KNOX.

☞ There were in this port on Saturday 708 vessels, including 31 steamers, 177 ships, 110 barks, 86 brigs and 304 schooners. Seamen were less plenty, and they were getting rather more liberal remuneration. The present currency, according to the Shipping List, is as follows:

THE FIRE ON BOARD THE J. A. WESTERVELT.—There is every reason for attributing the fire on this ship on Friday night, to the agency of river thieves, who, in the temporary absence of the watchman, broke open the cabin, and after plundering it of all they could lay hands on, set the vessel on fire to conceal their crime. Capt. AUSTIN had a hundred sovereigns in his trunk, which were carried off, besides valuable clothes. The mate also had all his best clothes, boots, &c., stolen; the Captain's and mate's charts and instruments were all destroyed. The chronometer was ashore.

☞ The wooden building No. 199 Bowery, looks as if it were about to fall—it has had a leaning that way for a long while. Why do not the authorities look to it?

THREE STABLES AND TWO HORSES BURNED.—At 2½ o'clock Saturday morning a fire broke out in the frame stable No. 382 Eleventh avenue. Before the fire could be subdued three stables were burned, occupied respectively by PATRICK DOYLE, JAMES CADY and JOSEPH POLLOCK. Two horses belonging to Mr. CADY were burned to death. DOYLE and POLLOCK sustained a total loss. No insurance. Mr. CADY was insured for $500.

A DISHONEST SERVANT.—Rebecca Hunter, a domestic in the employ of Joseph W. Boves, No. 15 Wooster-street, was arrested yesterday, charged with stealing a gold watch worth $80, from Mr. Boves. The watch was recovered and the accused locked up for trial.

SUICIDE.—MARIA COOK, residing at No. 367 Madison street, committed suicide, yesterday, by hanging herself to the bed-post of her bed. She has been subject to fits of insanity, and is supposed to have committed the act during temporary aberration.

DEATH BY FALLING.—JACOB NAPOLEON, a laborer employed on the new building, No. 3 College Place, Saturday afternoon fell through the hatchways and was killed. The Coroner has been notified.

ACTION UNDER THE FUGITIVE SLAVE LAW.—In the United States District Court, at Columbus, Ohio, on the 21st inst., Judge LEAVITT charged the Grand Jury in relation to the provisions of the Fugitive Slave law—remarking that a complaint founded upon the seventh section of that act would be submitted for their investigation. The complaint is against persons who participated in a rescue. His Honor does not appear to have charged very strongly in defence of the law. He ruled that the nature of the offence must be definitely settled; and in reality nullified the worst features of the act by the following declaration:

"The offence of 'harboring' is not committed unless the result is the actual prevention of the recapture of the fugitive. In regard to 'concealing,' it implies actual knowledge, on the part of the person charged with the offence, that the party was a fugitive slave, and that he concealed him from observation in such way as to defeat the vigilance and intentions of the party seeking to make the arrest. In speaking of this, I will remark again that there must have been a knowledge that the person escaping was a fugitive slave, and that knowledge may be a positive knowledge, or deduced from the circumstances of the case. It has been decided in this and other Courts that, under this law and the old law of 1793, the offence of harboring and concealing and assisting in the escape of a negro was not consummated by merely ministering to his wants, and giving to him that charity and assistance which might unite for his comfort and necessities."

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COMMON PLEAS.—Adjourned for the term.

UNITED STATES COMMISSIONERS' COURT.

John Swamberg and John Wendell, master and mate of the schooner Mary Alice, were arrested the latter part of September last, on a charge of smuggling $3,000 cigars, and brought before Commissioner Betts for examination, which was concluded on the 24th inst.

The facts elicited were, that the schooner arrived at Upper Quarantine in September last, with fruit and ballast, as appeared from the manifest, that some few days before arrival the cigars were taken out of the cabin and packed in provision barrels and placed in the hold, which were, by orders of the Captain, transferred to the steam-tug R. C. Smith, and brought to this City, when they were seized.

In defense, it was denied that the Captain or mate had any knowledge of the shipment of the cigars, but that the second mate, who claims the cigars, caused them to be transferred to the steamer, while the Captain was in the cabin; also, that the prosecution had not established the fact that the cigars were of foreign manfacture or had been imported in the schooner for sale.

Ex-Judges Beebe and Birdsall for defendants. F. Smyth, Esq., for Government.

The parties were each held in $3,000, and gave bail.

CASE OF H. MILLS VS. THOMAS AUSTIN, CAPTAIN OF THE SHIP J. A. WESTERVELT.

This case was resumed at 1 o'clock on Saturday at the Commissioner's rooms, in College-place.

For the Government—John Taylor was called and sworn, who testified to the general bad character of the provisions dealt out to the passengers, much of which he could not eat, and fell back on his own stores, but he made no complaint to the Captain; Cohen, a Hungarian, on one occasion, went to the Doctor with some offensive beef, and asked to have it changed for pork, but he was repulsed; he heard Cohen tell his brother the meat stunk, and he could not eat it; he applied also to the mate and carpenter, but got no satisfaction; he heard a general murmur all over the ship about the character of the provisions; several passengers threw their beef out of the port-holes; this witness saw the Captain assault Mills, holding him by the hair of his head and striking him with his fist; afterwards ordering him in irons.

The cross-examination elicited no new facts, except that Mills twice told the Captain he would speak and assert his rights, after being told to "shut up."

Thomas Horner, the surgeon of the ship, an Englishman, was sworn, and testified that the provisions were all passed upon by the Emigrant Commission in Liverpool before the ship sailed, and after the provisions were on board; he superintended the giving out of the provisions, and said they were all good; he ate a biscuit himself every time he gave them out; the flour was what is called seconds—not white and nice, but it was good, and, as well as the potatoes, was the same kind as was used in the cabin; the oatmeal he ate himself—had a cake made of it, which was good; he did not see the provisions put on board, and did not see a sloop alongside after the ship hauled in the stream, putting provisions on board; the first beef opened was bad, and he reported it to the Captain, and by his (the Captain's) order it was battened down and sent below; he charged that Mills used insolence to Captain Austin.

Mr. McDermaid, the mate of the ship, was then called, but the District-Attorney objected to his being sworn, as he had been present throughout the examination, and, besides, was improperly biased. He was sworn, however, and testified that the provisions were all good, and sustained the Doctor's testimony as to the survey held on them by the Commissioners authorized to inspect them in Liverpool.

Mr. Newman, the counsel for the Government, made a short summing up of the testimony, and Mr. Donohue, for the defence, also made some closing remarks. The Commissioner said he would look over the testimony, and meantime reserved his decision.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Hon. Recorder Smith.

Saturday was the last day of the October term of this Court, but although there were no Jury trials, and only two prisoners to be sentenced, some of the business transacted was quite important, nevertheless.

James McAlpine, alias Lieutenant-Colonel Marmaduke Reeves, of her Majesty's British army, who has been so often before the police authorities on various charges, was arraigned on a charge of attempting to obtain a large sum of money from the Accessory Transit Company, on the ground that while on his way to San Francisco, he lost overboard a trunk containing many thousands of dollars, and other valuable property—such trunk, as is alleged by the prosecution, never having been in his possession, the whole being a scheme to obtain money from the Company under false pretences. He pleaded not guilty, and will be tried next term.

THE MURDER IN THE TENTH-AVENUE.

James Rodgers, arrested on Thursday last at Woodbridge, N. J., on the charge of murdering John Swanston, the unfortunate man who was quietly proceeding home from market with his wife on Saturday night, the 17th inst., and stabbed in the most unprovoked manner, was brought to the bar, and required to plead to the charge. He replied in a very indistinct manner, that if he was guilty, he did not know what he had done, for he was drunk at the time. The Recorder instructed Mr. Kellogg to take him aside and confer with him. This was done, and after a brief conversation with him Mr. Kellogg put in a plea of "Not guilty." On being asked whether he had any counsel to defend him, Rodgers replied that he supposed his friends would take care of him in that respect. Nevertheless, the Court assigned Mr. Kellogg as his counsel. He will be tried next term. Rodgers is only 17 years old, and presents rather a stupid than a ferocious appearance.

James Nugent and Richard Rikeman each pleaded guilty to petit larceny, and were sentenced, the former to six months, and the latter to three months in the Penitentiary.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIVE INDICTMENTS AGAINST LIQUOR DEALERS QUASHED.

Mr. Theodore E. Tomlinson, as counsel for the Liquor Dealers Association, moved to quash one hundred and twenty-five indictments, found by the Grand Jury of the present term against sundry liquor dealers in the City for violating the Excise Law by selling liquor on Sundays. He remarked that it was unnecessary for him to discuss the subject, as the Recorder had already delivered his opinion of the illegality of such indictments, and had been sustained therein by Judges Wright and Harris.

The Recorder asked whether the form of the indictment was the same as that upon which his previous decision was rendered.

Mr. Sedgwick, the Assistant District-Attorney replied that it was. He inferred from the notice of motion served upon him by Mr. Tomlinson, that it would be made on the same points as were presented on the argument before Judge Russell. This motion was in the discretion of the Court, and as that was the case, the District-Attorney wished to suggest that, as he was awaiting a decision of the Supreme Court, on a certiorari, the Recorder would lay over this motion until that decision was rendered, first as a matter of expediency, and secondly as a matter of comity and respect to his brother Judge.

Recorder SMITH said that in the first charge he delivered to the Grand Jury after the passage of the excise law he stated that under that law they had no right to find indictments unless the question had first been submitted to a magistrate. Knowing that this was an important question, and that it would necessarily come before him, he examined the law very carefully, and understanding the statute so clearly as he did, he considered it his duty to expressly state to the Grand Jury that they had no right to initiate the proceedings under that act. The offence being a misdemeanor, and the manner in which accused parties were to be brought to justice pointed out, the statute would have to be complied with before the Grand Inquest had a right to interfere. He did not think he would be infringing upon the rules of comity if he decided differently from Judge Russell. Before Judge Russell rendered his decision the question came before him, and although it was not necessary for him to pass upon the whole question on that occasion, yet as he was aware that the question would come up in a different form, he considered it right and proper to give his views upon the section relative to selling liquor on Sunday. The case was now pending before the Supreme Court of this district. Since the decision, which he made in that case, the same points precisely were presented and passed upon by two very eminent Judges (Harris and Wright), confirming his decision. These indictments having been found directly in the face of the directions given by the Recorder to the Grand Jury in regard to the law, he thought he would not be discharging his duty if he hesitated at the first opportunity which presented itself to release these parties from those indictments. Every time they appeared in this Court they were subjected to costs and expense, which, in his view of the law, they should not be subjected to, and a substantial right given to them by this act was denied. An accused party could go before a magistrate and be tried at much less expense than he could in the Court of Sessions. This right the statute guaranteed to him, and the Grand Jury had no right to deprive him of it. He regretted that there was any difference of opinion between him and his associate on this subject; but he did not feel justified in holding one hundred and fifty people for trial, when the indictments were found against his express direction, and where the Supreme Court sustained his views. The indictments in this case must be quashed, and the Clerk will enter an order to that effect.

The Court then adjourned for the term.

COURT OF SPECIAL SESSIONS—Oct. 24.

Before Justices Osborn and Flandreau.

There was an unusual number of Germans in the Court-room interested in the various cases—largely in the majority for some reason or another—in which their countrymen were defendants or complainants. The friends of the parties charged, as reported below, with stealing lard from their employer, were especially numerous. "What brings this crowd here this morning?" asked Judge OSBORN of their Counsel. "There are about five hundred of your Dutch constituents of the Tenth Ward here this morning, Judge," replied the lawyer, "the friends of the parties in that lard case."

The first case was that of John McKeever and Lewis Turner, the first of whom keeps a drinking place in the Sixth Ward. Mr. John F. McCann, a book-keeper, said he was passing through Walker-street with a friend, about 10 o'clock P. M., Oct. 13, when McKeever, Turner, and two others, rushed from the steps of McKeever's bar-room, corner of Elm-street, and, without provocation, insulted him grossly and violently assaulted him. The complainant finally got away from them, procured an officer and had Turner arrested. Justice Brennan liberated him, and McCann entered a complaint at the Toombs, upon which McKeever was arraigned. The others were not in custody. Justice Brennan appeared for the prisoner, and pleaded his case zealously. McKeever was let off with a fine of only $5.

G. W. Burns and James Croesney, both small boys, were charged with a petit larceny committed Oct. 21. John Berrian was the complainant. Judge Osborn—What's your name? Prisoner—George Washington Burns. Judge Osborn—George Washington Burns, eh? The complainant said Burns was less culpable than Croesney. Judge Osborn—Let Burns go, send Croesney to the House of Refuge.

Herman Dugan and Martin Murphy, also boys, permitted their appetites to overcome their conscientious scruples, Oct. 22, and ran off with some cooked sausages. Susan Dearch saw them do it. Judge Osborn—Did they eat them? Witness—I saw 'em sit down a little way off. I don't know whether they ate them or not. Judge Osborn (to the Prisoners)—What have you got to say? Prisoner—I didn't take 'em. Nother boy stole 'em and gave 'em to me. Judge Osborn—Oh, yes. The old story. Shall we send them to the House of Refuge? Judge Flandreau—House of Refuge.

Bridget Fitzsimmons was charged with committing an assault and battery upon officer James Hurley, of the Twentieth Precinct Police, Oct. 21. Judge Osborn—How did she get those scratches on her face. Officer—She fell down. Prisoner—Oh, Judge, he beat me with a club. Judge Flandreau—You can go. We find you guilty and suspend sentence. "Bless you," said she,—and made her speedy exit.

Catherine Everett for stealing $3 worth of sheets (Oct. 21) from John Larkin's clothes line, was sent up for two months.

Dennis McCaffrey, another juvenile offender, pleaded guilty to defrauding Henry B. Phelps, in procuring from him, upon the representation that he was acting on behalf of his employer, $45 68. Counsel insisted upon calling back one of the witnesses who had left the stand, to ask him an unimportant question. After it was answered, "What nonsense it is," said Judge OSBORN, "to try to humbug the Court in this way. Take him to the House of Refuge."

James McShane, "in shabby habiliments dressed," was arraigned on the charge, preferred by Martha Leach, of stealing sixty-four cents in silver coin, Oct. 21. Judge Osborn—What have you got to say, McShane? Prisoner—I had been out with the Light Guards, and was going home when she had me taken up. Judge Osborn—Do you belong to the Light Guards? Prisoner—Yes, Sir, I do. Judge Osborn—To the light-fingered Guards more likely. Prisoner—Judge, I didn't never took it. Judge Osborn—The evidence is that you did. Prisoner—No, Judge, I didn't. Judge Osborn—I find you guilty and sentence you to the Penitentiary for six months. If this girl had resisted you, you would have committed violence upon her. McShane accosted her in the street, and told her that if she didn't give him all the money she had, he would have her arrested.

James Cooper, while intoxicated, gave Eliza Cooper a severe beating, Oct. 21. She was lenient and he was let off.

James Maturin plead guilty to a charge of petit larceny. He said "he thought he had liberty to take the property." He had a wife and child. The Court thought he was sufficiently punished, having been in prison several days, and sentence was suspended.

Bridget Colwell stole a black frock-coat from Albert Bemburgher, Oct. 22. Judge Osborn—What have you to say? The prisoner talked a great deal to no purpose. Judge Flandreau—You're an old offender. We find you guilty, and sentence you to the Penitentiary for six months.

There were two complaints against John Burns, both entered by Martin Galvony, in which he was charged with stealing a shovel and assaulting the complainant, Oct. 22. He was tried and acquitted on both.

John Herman left his work, Oct. 22, went home drunk, turned his family all out of doors, and beat his wife Wilhelmina. His wife said he generally supported his family. Judge Osborn delivered the sentence of the court: "Let him go."

Charles Finto was seen to put his hand into the money drawer of Jacob Schaffer's Lager Bier Saloon, No. 163 West 46th-st., Oct. 21, and withdraw therefrom $1 in silver coin. He had been some time suspected, was watched and caught in the act. His address for two months will be "Blackwell's Island."

George Harrison, a child, was arraigned on a charge of assault and battery, committed (with a knife) upon Matthew McCue, Oct. 23. He was not large enough to be a very dangerous assailant. "Assault and battery," said Alderman Wilson, who was in court, "Assault and battery!—I'd pay him for an assault and battery—give him an apple." Judge Osborn.—"I don't like to send him to the House of Refuge for an assault and battery. We suspend sentence. Let him go."

Herman Fischer was charged with an assault and battery on Lewis Wilkins. Lewis said he was passing the grocery store, in which the defendant was employed, with a stone jug full of Stoughton Bitters in his hand. The defendant and several others stood in the door, and one of them threw a stone at him, and broke the jug, and afterwards fell to beating him. The defendant proved a different story, and was discharged.

Hugh McSorley was charged with an assault and battery upon Peter Steinmacher, Oct. 3. Peter was a German and a bad witness. The offence was alleged to have been committed on Saturday. Witness—On Sunday he made a mess. Counsel—Stop a moment. Witness—Oh, I can speak. On Sunday,—Counsel—One moment,— Judge Flandreau—No matter about Sunday. What did he do on Saturday? Witness—He struck me. Counsel—There, that's enough. Judge Flandreau—Any more witnesses? Witness—Yes: Jacob Klitz (calling) Jacob; Jacob! Jacob came up and kissed the book. He told his story in very emphatic broken English. Counsel—Stop one moment. Have you been drinking anything this morning! Judge Flandreau—No; it's only his natural German manner. The complaint was that the prisoner committed a violent assault upon the complainant in the oyster saloon of the latter. The defence was that the prisoner went into Steinmacher's saloon to get some lager-bier with a friend, when they were both attacked and knocked down; that they were the aggrieved, and not the aggressors. Counsel for the prisoner called, as a witness, John Coyle, remarking, sotto voce, "We'll soon unfold this mortal coil." Coyle said he saw McSorley run out of the saloon with his head cut, and Steinmacher standing in front of his place with a club in his hand. The prisoner was discharged.

Edward Wild, William Snyder, Feilx Glover and Frederick Bietinck, all Germans, found guilty of stealing some lard from their employer, Benjamin W. Floyd, No. 84 Allen-st eet, Oct. 16, were set at liberty—the Court suspending sentence. In leaving Mr. Floyd's employment they claimed more wages than he paid them, and they took the lard to balance accounts.

Martin Malone for an assault and battery upon Mary McPeck, No. 139 Cherry-street, Oct. 22, was fined $10. Counsel—He can't pay it, Judge. Judge Osborn—Well, $5,—make it $5.

Murders.

A horrible murder, by slaves, occurred last week in Alabama. Mr. R. E. STEWART, a planter residing ten miles from Livingston, was assassinated while in his bed. His overseer, eighteen years old, late on Friday evening reported to the Sheriff of this County, D. L. ATKINS, that his employer was missing, and that he had apprehensions that Mr. STEWART had met with a sad fate. On Sunday morning citizens went to STEWART's house, to prosecute further inquires, and stains of blood were discovered on the bed clothing, on the floor, and also on a wagon on the premises. One of the negroes then confessed that Mr. STEWART was killed by four of his negroes about 12 o'clock on Thursday night, at the instigation of the overseer, and that his body had been carried off to a field about a mile and a half distant from the house, and there buried. The negro accompanied a large crowd to the field, and pointed out the exact spot where the deceased was buried. The body was disinterred, and found to be in a horrid mangled condition. Near this spot a place was found where a fire had been kindled, and the charred remnants of feathers discovered, and feathers were seen scattered about, evidently showing that a bed had been burnt there. The overseer, and ten of STEWART's negroes, were apprehended, and lodged in jail.

Canada was startled, a short time ago, by the statement that one of her backwood homes, in the Upper Ottawa country, had been entered by three ruffians at the dead of night, and the father of the family dragged out and murdered—the members of the family who tried to prevent them being knocked down and otherwise maltreated. The murdered man was a French Canadian, named SANSON or SAMPSON, and a neighbor named KEARNS, who had a quarrel with him about the ownership of a farm, was suspected. This KEARNS had threatened the life of any one who should take possession of the farm, and the deceased did take possession of it. KEARNS and a man named DILLON were brought to trial for the murder last week, in Perth, but the evidence of their identity not being very strong, the attack having been made in the dark by persons with blackened faces, the Jury returned a verdict of "not guilty."

A horrible affair took place on board the steamer Julia, on her last trip up from Napoleon to Memphis. Two men, HUDSON and GOFOURTH, got into a dispute relative to sharing the proceeds of some gambling transaction, conducted on joint account. One called the other a liar, and mutual recrimination passed. GOFOURTH then drew a pistol, and pointing it, said "If you do not pay me I will shoot you." HUDSON, as quick as thought, seized the pistol with one hand and stabbed him with a knife, killing him instantly. The body of the murdered man and the murderer was put on the steamer Rainbow, to be carried back to Napoleon, Memphis. This same HUDSON is already under a bond of $10,000 for killing a man named MURRAY.

☞ We learn from the Lansing (Iowa) Mirror that a man named CHARLES O'NEIL, ten miles west of that town, stabbed his wife and a person named Reuben WEAVER. It appears that O'NEIL saw his wife go to WEAVER's store, where he found her in bed with the adulterer. He immediately fell upon them with a knife, stabbed him seven times in the back between the shoulders, inflicting three wounds upon his wife as she was getting out of the window. O'NEIL has been arrested.

☞ The Shelbyville (Ky.) Banner of yesterday says: A man named JOHN MCHENRY, in the employ of Mr. MURDOCK, at his steam saw-mill, under pretence of not receiving sufficient wages, on Wednesday evening, sat down on a log near the mill, deliberately loaded a pistol, and while Mr. MURDOCK was at work but a few yards from him, fired at him, the contents passing through one cheek and out of his mouth, knocking out a number of teeth, but not fatally injuring him. He was arrested.

Suicides.

Mrs. Ruff, the wife of a citizen of Mount Pleasant township, Westmoreland county, Penn., committed suicide on the 8th inst., by hanging herself in a room adjoining her bedroom. Cause, insanity from religious excitement.

Heatheley Bandall, of Bowdoinham, Me., committed suicide by drowning himself in the river at Bowdoinham village, on Saturday last; he was 42 years of age, a man of steady habits.

A farmer named Nash cut his throat in the town of Gatee, N.Y., on Thursday. He had conceived the idea that he and his family would starve during the coming winter. He leaves a widow and several children.

Dr. Hampton, a physician in Chicago, committed suicide last week in consequence of pecuniary troubles. He leaves a widow and six children.

A man named Ryan, disappointed in love, shot himself in Hallowell, Me., on the 13th inst. A young factory-girl had jilted him.

Obituary.

Mrs. Dr. Rush, a lady celebrated in the fashionable world, died, as telegraph has already announced, at Saratoga last week, after an illness of two months. She was the wife of Dr. James Rush, of Philadelphia, and daughter of the late Jacob Ridgeway. She spent several years in Europe, and was the charm of the social circle in which she moved.

John Hagan, Sr., an old resident of New-Orleans, died on the 16th instant, at the age of 77. He was one of the defenders of that city under Jackson, in 1815, and for 40 years has been a prominent cotton merchant.

Hawaii mourns greatly over the death of John Young, a gentleman of English parentage, who has held important offices in the Islands. He was once Governor of Maui, afterwards Premier, and latterly Minister of the Interior.

Hon. James B. King, a prominent citizen of Ohio, of Virginia birth, a few days ago. He was a member of the State Constitutional Convention, and of the State Board of Equalization, and a Trustee of Miami University.

George Woods, a native of Massachusetts, died at St. Louis last week, of dilapidation. He was only 27 years of age, and died of debauchery, exposure and starvation, a pitiable spectacle.

Progress of Walker's Expedition—Letter from Captain Henry.

From the San Antonio Herald.

POWDER HORN, Sunday, Oct. 4, 1857.

COL. LOGAN: I am now in this place, waiting for orders from Gen. WALKER, previous to moving further. The boys are beginning to come in, but they will not leave until we receive further instructions from Head quarters. I expect by next Tuesday's mail something definite. Tell those who are willing to join us in the expedition not to be bluffed off by the hostile appearance of the great man at the White House. He is only joking about stopping us; it is merely for bunco-be. But if he does really attempt such a movement, I am a Secessionist from this date, and there will be two hundred thousand of a like spirit with myself, in the Southern portion of the United States.

Yours, respectfully, W. R. HENRY.

FIRE AT GRAND DE TOUR, ILLINOIS—LOSS $60,000.—The extensive plow factory of Messrs. ANDRUS & BOSWORTH, at Grand de Tour, Ill., was burned on the 13th inst. They had on hand about $40,000 worth of plows, that were all ready for market, all of which were consumed, together with all of the expensive and labor-saving machinery that they had in operation. The fire is supposed to be the work of an incendiary. The loss will probably exceed $60,000, with an insurance of $10,000. About 100 hands are thrown out of employment.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The steamship Baltic, from Liverpool on the 14th inst., arrived at this port yesterday afternoon, bringing four days' later intelligence from Europe. It is of an important character. The financial revulsion in this country—though the worst was not known on the other side—had influenced the London Money market to such an extent that the Bank of England has raised its rate of discount to 7 per cent., and the general impression was that, within a few days, this figure would be still further advanced to eight per cent. The drain of gold was enormous; on the 13th inst. a sum of 400,000 sovereigns was actually engaged for shipment to the United States. After the news by the Persia had been received, Consols fell to 87½, but on the day the Baltic left Liverpool, they had rallied again to 88. The Bank of France had raised its rate of discount to 6½ per cent.

We receive no political intelligence of any interest by the Baltic. The honor of the American turf has been, in a measure, redeemed by Prioress, who won the great Cesarewitch Handicap at Newmarket in gallant style. The success of the American was greeted by the spectators with loud cheering. In the late storm along the British coast two American vessels were lost—the Boston bark Warden, with seven lives, and the Lexington, with three lives.

The news from India is important and highly encouraging. General HAVELOCK gained his ninth victory on the 10th of August, driving the mutineers from a strong position near Bithoor, which they desperately defended. Reinforcements, under Gen. OUTRAM, were expected to reach Cawnpore by the 9th of September. Lucknow was still safe. The besieged were in good spirits, well supplied with provisions, and, the report says, can easily hold out until they are relieved. No attack had been made upon Delhi, but the arrival of a siege-train and further reinforcements indicate that due preparations are being made for that event. Lord ELGIN had returned to China.

By the arrival at this port of the brig Ocean Bird from San Juan del Norte, we have received advices from Nicaragua to the 29th ult. All Americans suspected of sympathizing with WALKER have been expelled from the country. At the Presidential election, held in Nicaragua on the 26th ult., Gen. MARTINEZ was the successful candidate. Great defensive preparations are going on for the reception of the next fillibustering expedition under WALKER, and in this connection we publish an interesting statement of the number and present disposition of the Nicaraguan army. Col. LOUIS SCHLESSINGER has just returned from the country. In a letter which we publish elsewhere, he defends himself from the charges upon which he was convicted by one of WALKER's courts-martial.

We have news from Campeachy and Sisal to the 26th of September. There had been no further actual hostilities, though the contending parties still maintained a belligerent attitude. The Indians of the interior, taking advantage of the unsettled condition of affairs, had entered a village, apparently with friendly intentions, and, gaining admission to the houses, commenced an indiscriminate slaughter of men, women and children. Very few of the inhabitants escaped. Over five hundred bodies had been found, and more were being discovered daily.

The Money market was easier at the close of last week to moderate dealers at bank. The country circulation is adding to the discount ability of the City, and although the heavy mercantile firms already in embarrassment are not relieved by it, the case is different with trade generally. The Stock market is depressed by the foreign accounts—the news of dearer money in England, and the possibility of embarrassment to some of the American houses being actively employed by the speculators against a rise. There were several heavy failures rumored on Saturday, but none so far verified as to authorize the use of names. The Domestic Exchanges with Philadelphia, Baltimore and Richmond were worse. The European Exchanges from 1 to 2 per cent. higher for select bills. The weekly import of Dry Goods has fallen quite low, while the export list of domestic produce, and articles of foreign growth returned for a better market than they find here, is on the increase.

The rainy weather, on Saturday, was against a vigorous business in the General Produce Markets. Flour declined 5c.@10c. ₱ bbl., with more sellers than buyers. A good demand existed for Wheat—prime lots of which ruled firm. Other kinds fell off 3c.@4c. ₱ bushel. Corn was dull and heavy. Oats were in limited request at easier rates. Provisions were quiet, and rather unsettled in price. Less activity was discernible in Groceries at previous quotations. No important movement transpired in other branches of trade. The number of vessels of all classes in port was 708.

The Virginia Synod of the New School Presbyterian Church, in session last week at Washington, recommended a withdrawal from the General Assembly, in consequence of its action on the Slavery question, by a vote of 32 to 3. The action of that portion of the Church which lately met at Richmond was approved.

The Secretary of War, on Friday, visited Fort Hamilton and Fort Richmond, and, on Saturday, with Gen. TORTON, Col. LAY, Major BARNARD, and Lieut. MCFURSTON, proceeded, at 10 o'clock, from the Battery, in a Government barge, to Governor's Island. The seven Companies of the United States troops, (800 men,) Capt. JONES commanding, now stationed there, were reviewed; the Hospital, the musicians' quarters, and the fortifications on the Island successively inspected. Gov. FLOYD appeared to be very much gratified with all he saw. He will visit the other fortifications in the harbor to-day.

A Fusion Convention composed of two Republicans and two Americans from each Ward have had two meetings, and are to meet again. At the first meeting, on Friday night, Mr. N. A. Dow, of the Ninth Ward, being Chairman, resolutions were passed advising the Republicans to substitute ALEX. SPAULDING for HIRAM KETCHUM, (declined,) as candidate for Recorder, and to drop RICHARD REED, their candidate for the Marine Court Judgeship, and advising the Americans to drop Judge BOSWORTH and put on LUMAN SHERWOOD, for the Superior Court. On Saturday evening the Convention could not agree which of the candidates for District-Attorney and Register should be thrown overboard. A Committee of five was appointed to consult with the American and Republican Conventions on the subject, and an adjournment was then taken to this afternoon.

It would appear from an article, which we publish elsewhere, from a St. Thomas paper, that Holland has settled all details for the general emancipation of slaves in the Islands of Curacoa, Boniaire, Aruba, and St. Eustatius. All the emancipated slaves who can, will be called upon to work for the State, which will pay them fair wages. According to the arrangements made, Holland will pay to every shareholder a fair equivalent for his slave.

A meeting of the hardware merchants of this City was held on Saturday, at the Astor House, to take into consideration the time of credits as at present allowed, and other subjects connected with the present embarrassment of trade. A few gentlemen expressed their opinions in regard to the credit system, proposing four months as the limitation, after which a Committee to draft resolutions was appointed, to report at the next meeting, to be held on Friday, when delegations from the hardware trade of other cities are invited to attend.

The falling off in the freight and passenger business among the various railroad and steamboat lines running out of this City, as exhibited elsewhere, presents in a striking light the extent to which the whole business of the country has been affected by the revulsion. There is scarcely one that has not lost from one-third to two-thirds of its business during the three weeks of October.

The receipts at the Tax Receiver's office up to Saturday were $1,536,635 28 against $2,405,297 49 for the corresponding number of days last year, making a difference in the receipts thus far of $868,662 03 in favor of last year. The falling off in the payments is to be attributed of course to the increased scarcity of money growing out of the financial revulsions.

Three boys attacked and robbed CHAS. T. FISHER, on Saturday night of 62 cents, all the money he had with him. The Police captured one of them, MICHAEL MARRIN, of Washington Market, and had him committed. HENRY NEWMAN, colored, has been arrested on a charge of setting fire to No. 58 Leonard street, from which he had been expelled as a boarder a few days previous. Lieut. EGBERT L. VIELE's pictures, furniture and carpets which were stolen during the summer vacation, have mostly been recovered. CHARLEY KING, the thief, put the officers on the search of MRS. FRANCES LINDOWER, No. 68 Leonard-street, who, her premises being searched, confessed that she had bought some of the pictures very cheap—$700 worth for $17—and left the rest on sale. Mr. HORACE H. LADD, of No. 63 Water street, while on his way to the broker's, Saturday afternoon, and probably busy with his umbrella, had his pocket picked of $1000 worth of Rhode Island bank bills, in a sealed package labeled by THOMPSON, MORSE & Co. Two brothers, DAN and MIKE SULLIVAN, were arrested, Saturday, charged with following a sailor in Cherry-street, and robbing him of his watch. The fraternal thieves were locked up for trial. No other Police news than we have noted in this paragraph occurred in the city on Saturday or Sunday.

On Friday night as TERESA DARK, a servant girl, was walking in Fifth-street, near Avenue B, close by her home, a carriage drove along with three men in it. Suddenly the carriage stopped and the men jumped out of the vehicle, seized the girl, lifted her in the carriage by main force, gagged her and attempted to violate her. She succeeded in making sufficient outcry to alarm the villains, when they pitched her out of the carriage into the street and drove hurriedly away. Some time afterwards the girl was taken up by some policemen and conveyed to the Station-house, where after receiving medical treatment she was conveyed home. The officers are in quest of the villains.

In the Court of General Sessions, on Saturday, JAMES RODGERS, the youth charged with the unprovoked murder of SWANSTON, in the Tenth-avenue, on the evening of the 17th inst., was arraigned before the Recorder and pleaded not guilty. On motion of the counsel for the Liquor Dealers' Association, the Recorder quashed 125 indictments, found by the Grand Jury against certain liquor dealers for selling liquor on Sunday—the indictments, in the Recorder's opinion, and as he instructed the Grand Jury, in his charge at the commencement of the term, being clearly illegal.

There were 17 more deaths from various causes in this City last week, than during the previous seven days. The whole number of deaths last week was 427—217 males, 210 females—of which consumption and infantile marasmus occasioned the greater number. No epidemic is prevailing with us, and the general health of the City is good.

The Police Commissioners met on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, and empowered Gen. NYE as Chairman of the Board, to preface his signature to the return to the mandamus in the case of MURPHY against the Police Commissioners, with the words, "By order of the Board."

Coroner GAMBLE'S Jury rendered a verdict Saturday in the case of EDWARD O'REILLY, who died of erysipelas, the result of injuries received on the head. O'REILLY'S wife testified that he told her that he was robbed last Thursday night and beaten over the head. No other witness supported her testimony. Coroner HILLS held an inquest at Bellevue yesterday on the body of an unknown man, 50 years old, who died Thursday. He told before his death that he was assaulted in the street, and badly beaten by persons unknown to him. A post mortem examination of the body of WM. HAIGHT, aged 83, who died Friday at the Almshouse, presented such an extravasation of the blood between the membranes of the brain, as to lead to the impression that his death was hurried by violence at the hands of some parties unknown before his admittance to the Island. A needy Italian, JOSEPH MARTINIS, blowed his brains out last Friday. The Coroner's inquest on Saturday found a verdict to that effect.

The steamship Atlantic for Liverpool, did not sail on Saturday. She will be detained until Tuesday, 27th.

The India News.

The news by the Baltic is highly favorable to the English in India. The tide is evidently turning in their favor, and we may expect to hear by the next India mail that the strength of this great rebellion has been broken, and the country effectually restored to British control. Then will commence the real difficulties of the crisis for the British Government, for it is impossible that India should continue to be governed by the same system which has led to this extensive and formidable insurrection.

The India news by this arrival may be summed up in few words—but as every point was considered before its arrival in the very extremity of danger, these few words tell the whole story of encouragement and eventual success. Delhi still held out on the 30th of August, but a sortie of the mutineers had been again repelled, and the arrival of the siege train, which was to be the signal for assault, was confidently expected within four days. The English garrison of Lucknow had not only held its position, but had made two successful sorties and and gained a new supply of provisions, which placed their ability to maintain themselves beyond doubt. HAVELOCK had defeated the rebels in a ninth battle and was at Cawnpore, awaiting reinforcements with which to go to the relief of Lucknow, by the middle of September. Several small mutinies at different points had been instantly suppressed, and no new outbreaks of any importance had occurred.

It is not at all likely that the mutineers will be able to make successful resistance at any point, after the English shall have fairly taken the field with the recruits, which would begin to reach India early in September.

The Money News by the Baltic.

We have stirring financial news by the Baltic. On the arrival out of the Persia from this side, the Bank of England Directors met on Monday, Oct. 12, and advanced the rate of discount to seven per cent., making a rise of 1½ per cent. in four days. At the regular meeting on Thursday, the day preceding the steamer's departure from Liverpool, it was anticipated that the rate would again be advanced to eight per cent., and some of the London authorities look for even ten per cent. before the crisis is fairly met. It must be borne in mind, however, that a clamorous party exists in England against the principles and sliding scale of Sir ROBERT PEEL'S Bank Act of 1844, and their organs of the press never fail to take advantage of emergencies like the present to anticipate the worst results from the working of the Act in question. The sudden scarcity of money in London and Liverpool, and the enormous applications at Bank and to the discount houses for accommodation, are undeniable facts, and the probability of a large number of failures among the Scotch and English manufacturers, from the poor returns and backward collections from the United States, will probably be greater than we have hitherto anticipated. Nor is the apprehension untimely that the trouble in Lyons, Paris, and in some of the German capitals, from the same cause, will be of a serious character.

Nothing is said by this arrival of the private banking interest connected with the United States. The worst was not yet known from this side, but even when the subsequent accounts are realized, it is questionable whether, from their great strength, any of the houses connected with our trade will give way. It is only from the complication of the India exchanges, which, notwithstanding the encouraging war news from that quarter, are quoted worse for London, with the American troubles, that serious danger to these houses, under a double pressure on the money market, is to be apprehended. If their own abundant means, and a strong array of wealthy friends, will avail, the probability is they will go through with credit.

The Gold brought by the present opportunity is about three hundred and sixty thousand dollars. The Persia, due on Wednesday, is expected to bring a million or a million and a half more. One of the Australian packets had just delivered fourteen hundred thousand dollars in London. The market at Liverpool for the American staples is reported steady, particularly for Cotton, and if anything like the prices quoted are sustained, or even a good demand insured for the next month or two, the fact will be of more importance in righting money affairs on this side than the receipt of the English gold to hasten the export movement; for the sufficient reason that our surplus crops were never larger.

There is one other feature in the present news not to be overlooked. The American Stocks held in England will not be returned on sale here. On the contrary, a disposition was evinced to speculate in them at the low prices, the London market being kept thereby in advance of our own for three or four prominent Railways, Stock and Bonds.

A Move in the Right Direction.

We publish this morning a circular from the Children's Aid Society of this City, to which we call the particular attention of our readers. This excellent institution, which has now established a network of communications between the labor-demand of the interior, and the labor-supply of the seacoast, and which is administered with as much of judgment as of enterprise, is now put forward by its managers as an efficient means for affording relief to the actual distress of the working classes. There is no exigency of the moment more pressing than the want which this Society purposes to meet.

On the 19th of October, our reporters ascertained that between six and seven thousand girls had, up to that date, been thrown out of work in this City. Appalling as this statement was, it will doubtless fall short of the actual truth at that time, and it may be safely assumed that more than ten thousand of this class are now absolutely destitute of all means of support, excepting such scanty savings as the more provident of their number may have accumulated, and such insignificant advances as they may be able to wring, at ruinous rates, from the reluctant pawnbrokers. These resources must, of course, be very soon exhausted by those who can command them, and it is perfectly plain that if something cannot be effectually and speedily done to reopen the channels of honest industry to these victims of the "panic," they must begin to contribute largely to the rising tide of misery and of crime which menaces the Metropolis. The Children's Aid Society proposes to do this necessary something, to do it effectually, and to do it speedily. Without interrupting the course of its legitimate activity, the Society offers to make itself the medium of information and of transportation between the Western homes which offer such numerous opportunities of employment to precisely this class of persons, and the sufferers among us.

No new organization could be set on foot for this purpose without a dangerous loss of time and a superfluous expenditure of means. The Children's Aid asks only for just so much money as shall enable it to extend its existing arrangements, and finds itself able to promise, that a new contribution to its funds of only $500 will suffice to set the emigration forward at once. Surely it is impossible that this appeal should not be immediately met by a practical response. Five hundred or five thousand dollars thus invested at this moment, will save our City and our citizens from incalculable mischief in the course of the next few months. Commanding as well from the employers as from those who seek employment all the confidence due to a well-established character, the Children's Aid Society possesses every requisite for accomplishing in the most satisfactory manner the noble work which it has undertaken. Let its hands then be strengthened, and at once, for there is not a moment to be lost when hesitation means the ruin of innocent lives, and delay is the herald of something worse than death to hundreds of human beings.

VIRGINIA POLITICS—SENATOR HUNTER'S LETTER UPON KANSAS AND THE ADMINISTRATION.—Senator HUNTER yields at last to the pressure which commands him to "define his position." He has been "suspected of being suspicious." The ultra and overzealous champions of the Administration have insisted upon knowing what he thought of Gov. WALKER and affairs in Kansas, and have menaced him with their dire displeasure if he failed to respond to their inquiries. He treated these threats with proper contempt for a long time,—but like all public men in these days, was forced to yield at last to the undignified and degrading tyranny of partisanship. Naturally ashamed of the part he is forced to play, he seeks to disguise it by pretending to answer the queries of a friend and by words of scorn for the requisitions of his foes;—but the disguise is thin and deceives nobody—not even Mr. HUNTER himself. The Enquirer has triumphed and forced him to an explanation, which will be found in another column of this morning's TIMES.

The Senator's letter will add nothing to his reputation. It is feeble in purpose and still feebler in argument. He is very explicit and emphatic in indorsing the principle of the Kansas-Nebraska bill,—which commits to the people of the Territory the absolute right, in forming a State Constitution, to admit or prohibit Slavery, as they may see fit. Yet he seeks to evade the practical application of this principle, by claiming for the Convention the right to adopt a Constitution, and, without submitting it to the popular vote, to send it to Congress for the approval which that body, in his opinion, has no right to withhold. It is impossible that Senator HUNTER should deceive himself by such sophistry as this;—and he will find it equally impossible to deceive anybody else. If he is sincere in indorsing the principle of Popular Sovereignty, why is he unwilling to allow that sovereignty its most direct and effective expression? Grant that the Convention duly and fairly represents the People of Kansas:—it is still not easy to see why its power or right should be paramount to that of the People themselves. But Senator HUNTER must know that it does not represent them,—that it was elected by less than one-third of their number, and cannot claim any right whatever, either actual or technical, to control their action or even express their will.

The simple fact is, the ultra Pro-Slavery men, in endeavoring to force Slavery upon Kansas through this Convention, on the plea that it represents the People and may therefore refuse them an opportunity to act for themselves, are engaged in a paltry, thimble-rigging attempt to dodge the consequences of their own principle of popular Sovereignty,—and Senator HUNTER, in lending himself to it, sinks his character as a statesman and a man of honor. It is one of the shabbiest and least creditable shifts even of the reckless, unprincipled partisanship of the present day.

The effort is evidently about to be made to force it upon the Democratic Party in Congress during the coming session. We can scarcely conceive it possible that President BUCHANAN should be weak enough to yield to it,—but attempts at prophecy upon that head are somewhat hazardous. It certainly is not possible that even the whole patronage and power of his Administration should be able to force it upon the people of the country. The Democratic party achieved power upon the principle that the People of Kansas should be left perfectly free to form and regulate their own domestic institutions for themselves. Senator DOUGLAS has already intimated his determination to insist upon a full and faithful redemption of this pledge: and if he takes that ground in the Senate, he will rally to himself the support, not only of the Democratic Party, but of the country at large.

ATLANTIC STEAMERS.—The Vanderbilt went to sea on Saturday, with an enormous crowd of passengers—nearly six hundred. The Atlantic was to have sailed at the same hour, but a serious fracture in her machinery was discovered at the last moment, which will detain her three or four days. Very great injustice was done to our mercantile community by the refusal of the Postmaster-General to permit her mails to be sent out by the Vanderbilt. It is a very poor consolation to be informed that "Mr. COLLINS is responsible" for the delay.

It is very evident that a complete revolution is in progress in our system of Ocean Steam Navigation. The Atlantic was going out with only twenty passengers. Commodore VANDERBILT is rapidly effecting his purpose of breaking down the monopoly which the mail contracts have given the other lines. His first blows are aimed at the Collins line,—as he always sails on the same day with its best steamers. He carries letters, not upon contract, but receiving as compensation the postage paid. He has reduced the price of a passage very largely, and has made some of the quickest trips ever effected. The result is a very serious curtailment of the patronage of the Collins line:—and unless their ships also reduce the price of passage it must inevitably be broken down.

The Cunarders from this port do better, because they sail on different days and enjoy a better reputation. But the Cunard line from Boston has been compelled to reduce its rates by the competition of the line of screw steamers from Quebec, which is making very rapid passages, and at very low prices. The result is that nearly all the Canadian patronage, which used to be a very large item in the business of the Cunard line from Boston, now takes the other route, and the Cunarders have accordingly very wisely reduced their rates from thirty guineas to twenty-two pounds,—a difference of nearly fifty dollars.

The Great Eastern, when it comes out, will make a still greater inroad upon the accustomed habits of our Ocean Steam Navigation Companies,—and we shall very soon see an entirely new state of things in regard both to the passenger traffic and the mail service. Monopolies, after all, do not succeed any better at sea than upon dry land.

A CONVENTION OF CANDIDATES.—Some enterprising politicians in Tennessee have addressed a long string of questions upon all possible subjects, to half a dozen gentlemen who expect to be candidates for the United States Senate. These gentlemen have held a Convention and unanimously agreed not to answer these inquiries until after they receive the nomination of their party caucus. This saves all but one of them the trouble of writing any reply at all. These little economical arrangements among political partizans are very convenient.

CATHERINE HAYS' HUSBAND.—The foreign news states that Miss HAYS, the singer, has recently married a Mr. BUSHNELL. The Sunday Times says that he was her business manager in California and Australia, and that before he could marry her he was under the necessity of visiting this country and procuring a divorce from his wife, which he accomplished, quietly and without her knowing much about it, in Connecticut.

Amusements.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—Every one will be delighted to hear that this popular place of amusement reopens for the Winter season on Wednesday next. The times are not sufficiently hard to reconcile us to an entire abnegation of Italian opera, and we are sure if conducted with spirit the management will enjoy the best patronage of the public. Several new engagements have been entered into, and HERR FOYERS, the great basso, is expected by the first teamer from Europe. The opening opera, it is understood, will be "Semiramide," with D'ANGRI as Arsace, and LA GRANGE as the heroine.

BURTON'S THEATRE.—Mr. BURTON has done the wisest thing that a manager could do in these times: he has reëngaged Miss CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN, and that great artiste appears to night as Lady Macbeth. The popularity of remarkable merit never fails, and we may therefore safely prophesy that the present engagement of Miss CUSHMAN will be as brilliant in its result as that which is just concluded.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—Two legitimate successes were made here last week, and they are on the bills to-night. For a thoroughly enjoyable evening we can recommend "Caprice" and "Past and Present." The finest acting in the City can be witnessed in these pieces.

LAURA KEENE'S THEATRE.—The ever active manageress of this handsome and admirably conducted establishment announces another new drama to-night. It is from the pen of Mr. WRAY, and is called "Birds of Prey." All the best actors of the theatre are in the cast, and we all know that it will be placed on the stage in a manner that cannot be surpassed. The farce of "Lend me Five Shillings," concludes the entertainment.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—During the present week Manager NIBLO will give his patrons three distinct entertainments every evening. 1, A comic pantomime by the RAVELS; 2, a ballet by Mlle. ROLLA; 3, the grand spectacle of "Boreas." Business ought to keep up at an establishment where so much activity is displayed.

BROADWAY THEATRE.—The incomparable Ronzani Ballet Troupe will appear to-night in an act of "Faust," and in the magnificent grand ballet of the "Golden Horse."

PURDY'S NATIONAL THEATRE.—The entertainments here to-night commence with "Bion the Wanderer," after which, for the first time, a new drama, in two acts, by C. L. BARNETT, Esq., called the "Warning Hand, or the Statue Lover;" to conclude with the farce called "Yankee Courting."

BOWERY THEATRE.—The tragedy of "Romeo and Juliet," the comic drama of "The Pride of the Market" and the farce of the "King of Clubs," are all on the bills for to-night.

BARNUM'S MUSEUM.—The Welsh Nightingale, the Carlo Family, and the Aquaria, are still the attractions here. The dramatic season at this house will commence on Monday next.

PANORAMA OF THE ARCTIC REGIONS.—This most interesting and deserving panorama is still on exhibition at Empire Hall. An explanatory lecture is delivered by Mr. WILLIAM MORTON, one of Dr. KANE'S most faithful adherents. The exhibition is an eminently gratifying one and deserves to be liberally supported.

DR. REENTZ'S PHYSIOLOGICAL MUSEUM.—This unique and valuable collection of physiological objects is beginning to attract the attention it deserves. More instruction can be derived from it of the human organization than could by a year's hard reading. The lectures of Dr. JACKSON are highly interesting, and delivered many times during the day and evening.

Academy of Music—A Suggestion.

BROOKLYN, Friday, Oct. 23, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Now that the Academy of Music is to be reopened for operatic representations, can't you induce the management to commence the performances at 7 o'clock, and have five-minute intermissions between the acts, (instead of twenty minutes or more,) so as to enable their patrons to reach home at a reasonable hour, thus accommodating New-Yorkers, Brooklynites, and the inhabitants of Jersey City?

It certainly is a great drawback to one's pleasure to have to wait till 8 o'clock or after these long evenings, and wait through tedious intermissions; a reform in this respect would put money in the pockets of the lessees, and another reform would bring hundreds of dollars to the house nightly, if they would not compel the public to pay 50 cents extra to secure seats; instead of our paying a premium to secure a seat, they ought to allow us a discount. They would soon find their interest in it. PATRON.

Cruelties to Seamen.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

SIR: I have read H. B. PARMALEE'S letter in this morning's TIMES, which you have been pleased to indorse; in reply to which I beg to state that I was the writer of the communication signed "Justice," which contained only a "specimen" of facts; that I was a passenger on board the Middlesex during the voyage in question, and am perfectly conversant with all the incidents connected with it; and pledge myself to the accuracy of every item in my letter. Indeed, Capt. P. does not attempt to deny them, but rather to justify the course which he and his officers pursued, and that, too, by a number of palpable exaggerations—not to say downright falsehoods.

He asserts, for instance, that he had a small crew and over 600 steerage passengers. Every one on the voyage knows that he had 38 men, besides 3 officers, and just 328 passengers, including 1st, 2d and 3d, and of these 10 died. He also asserts that many of the crew stowed away, and refused to work. MARSHALL, whom he almost beat to death on the 11th of April, was no stowaway, nor did he ever refuse to work. When they were unable to stand, from hunger and ill-usage, they laid down, and in some cases died in a day or two after. The following is an instance: On Thursday, the 31st of March, a man named BURKE, being all but dead from previous beatings, remained in bed, from whence he was dragged by the 1st mate and flogged in a most brutal manner. Next morning the same scene was enacted, and at 3 next morning he was found dead on the deck. He does not deny that the sailors were ill-treated, only that it was not from a "reckless or malicious spirit." I know not what the spirit might be termed that would prompt an officer to hang a man up by the neck, or choke him with his thumbs, or send him to the top of the mast to catch flies, or put him on his face to bite the deck till the blood ran in streams from his gums, or to make him eat tar, or fifty other things of the same species; "reckless or malicious" would be too moderate a definition for it.

It is very strange, indeed, that "H. B. P." should be ignorant of the fact that the Grand Jury did find bills of indictment against his first and second officers for "cruel and unusual punishment," and for "assaults with dangerous weapons," and that the trial of the former is pending the present session of the District Court; the latter having "cut his stick." In conclusion, I beg to inform you, Mr. Editor, that a goodly number of the passengers who were eye witnesses to the tragedies are still in the City, and that the depositions of many more, both of seamen and passengers, on the subject, are in the hands of District-Attorney MCKEON, who, it is to be hoped, will make a proper use of them. I remain, &c., JAMES REA.

SUDDEN DEATH ON SHIPBOARD.—Capt. L. C. GLIDDEN, of the schooner Silas Wright, from Savannah, (arrived yesterday,) was, Saturday morning, found dead in his berth. His disease was similar to the Georgia fever. He was 28 years old, and a native of Rockland, Maine.

The sloop Peggy, owned by C. ROBERTSON, was, on Saturday evening, accidently sunk in the Atlantic dock basin, Brooklyn. She had a cargo of 204 barrels of crude turpentine.

Employment at the Brooklyn Navy-Yard—Indian Outrages on Humboldt River—Proposed Purchase of Sonora and Lower California, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Oct. 25.

My dispatch of Friday evening in relation to Mr. HASKIN'S efforts to secure employment for the mechanics at the Brooklyn Navy-Yard, was bungled in the transmission.

It is the Brandywine, and not the Savannah, which the Secretary of War proposes to have altered into a propeller, with a view to keeping the men employed, who have completed the last-named vessel.

Advices received here state that the Indians in the Humboldt River, region of Northern California, are engaged almost daily in brutal outrages upon travelers, and the border settlers. The Government officials in that quarter seem to be doing little or nothing for the suppression of the evil. There is no doubt that the savages are under the influence of BRIGHAM YOUNG and his Mormon coadjutors.

It is supposed that Mr. FORSYTH, our Minister at Mexico, has a proposition before the Government of COMONFORT at this time, for the purchase of Sonora and Lower California, under instructions sent him some time since. Late advices, however, make it quite certain that the negotiation cannot be successful,—and even if it could, the United States would be compelled to back out from its consummation for want of funds. [FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Saturday, Oct. 24.

The British Government will take no steps in reference to the Nicaragua Transit, except in connection with the Government of the United States. None of the alleged contracts with Costa Rica, on this subject, have been made with the countenance of England. Of all this our Government is well informed.

So far from the British Cabinet having under discussion the propriety of the recall of the troops from India, as reported by an alleged letter from Mr. DALLAS, it was, at the latest accounts, received this morning, about to make renewed exertions for the suppression of the mutiny. The statement may here be made, on authority, that it is not the intention of the British Government to have recourse to foreign enlistments in the present emergency, though it is sensible of the good intentions of many parties who have offered their services in India.

REPUBLICAN MASS MEETING—THE STATE FAIR—MONEY AFFAIRS, &c.

BOSTON, Saturday, Oct. 24.

Faneuil Hall was well filled to-night by the supporters of the Hon. N. P. BANKS. The meeting was presided over by JOHN P. PUTNAM, Esq., assisted by CHARLES HALE, S. A. BRADBURY and numerous others. The Secretaries were J. R. MARSH and A. B. HARDY. Addresses were made by the President and by Hon. GIDEON HAYNES and others. The latter, in the course of his remarks, referred to Senator SUMNER as being, in capacity and intellect, as far superior to any man of South Carolina as heaven is higher than the earth, which was received with great cheering.

Hon. HENRY WILSON said the decision of the people of Massachusetts at the last election, which they are now called upon to renew, was in favor of universal freedom and liberty. In referring to the effects of the Dred Scott decision, he said the descendants of the Colored Battalion, who were publicly thanked by General JACKSON for their bravery at the battle of New-Orleans, were not entitled to the rights of citizenship. The Congress of the United States was as much under the control of the State-power as the French Assembly is under the dictation of LOUIS NAPOLEON; and JOHN DAVIS, after long years of service in Congress, when about to retire from public life, stated that no bill or measure had been passed through Congress without its being understood it was to enure to the benefit and interests of Slavery. Mr. W. referred Mr. PIERCE as going as deep in servility to the Slave-power as he could, but President BUCHANAN had found a lower deep in asserting that the Constitution wherever it went into the Territories carried with Slavery it. He then referred in highly eulogistic terms to Mr. BANKS, 'claiming that Mr. BANKS presided over the deliberations of Congress with ability second not even to HENRY CLAY.

Other speakers followed, and the meeting broke up about 10½ P. M. It was a very enthusiastic gathering.

The Agricultural State Fair closed to-day with rather a slim attendance. The exhibition has been every way comprehensive and interesting, but the lateness of the season and unpropitious weather have prevented the general popular success which otherwise would have attended it.

There has been little change to note in financial matters during the week. Stocks continue to be pressed for sale and range low.

The amount of specie held by the associated banks in the Clearing House on the day of suspension was $2,461,000. The amount held this day at the commencement of business was $2,888,100. Increase since Oct. 14, $427,100.

THE UTAH MILITARY EXPEDITION—THE CALIFORNIA WAGON-ROAD, ETC.

ST. LOUIS, Saturday, Oct. 24.

Captain VAN VLEIT, from Utah Sept. 14, arrived here last night. He reports having met the troops composing the Utah Expedition, Sept 22, two hundred and thirty miles beyond Fort Laramie—all well. He also met Colonel JOHNSTON, Oct. 18, ninety miles from Fort Laramie, and Governor CUMMING, Oct. 8, ninety miles beyond Fort Kearney. Some of the supply trains were within 140 miles of Salt Lake Valley, while others were far behind, and not likely to arrive this season. Captain VAN VLEIT has traveled over twenty-four hundred miles since August 1. He was treated with much consideration by the leading men of Salt Lake City, but heard the expression of only one opinion, viz.: that the troops and Government officers would never gain a foothold in their dominions.

Heavy snow fell at Fort Bridges on the 15th ult.

Hon. J. M. BERNHEISEL, Delegate to Congress from Utah, accompanies Capt. VAN VLEIT. They leave for Washington to-day.

Messrs. NICHOLS and REHER, engineers of Magraid's wagon-road train, have arrived here. They left Pacific Springs on the 7th ult., and think that the train will winter at Fort Laramie. They report the cattle of the government dying fast, and the mules breaking down. Grass was very scarce. Col. HOFFMAN, commander at Fort Laramie, denies having caused a Mormon train to be overhauled.

New School Presbyterian Synod.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, Oct. 24.

The Virginia Synod of the Presbyterian Church have adopted the report of the Committee presented yesterday, recommending a withdrawal from the General Assembly, in consequence of the action of that body on the Slavery question. The vote was 32 against 3. The nays were Messrs. SUDDLARTH and HASKELL, of Washington, and DUNBAR, of Baltimore.

The Synod adopted resolutions approving the resolutions adopted by a portion of the Church which lately met in Richmond, and pledging itself to cordially coöperate in the organization of the United Synod of the Presbyterian Church, to meet at Knoxville, Tenn., on the first Thursday of next month.

IMPORTANT FROM NICARAGUA.

Arrival of the Brig "Ocean Bird" from San Juan—Decree of Expulsion against Foreigners—Martinez Elected President—Great Defensive Preparations for the Reception of Walker—Disposition of the Present Force in Nicaragua—Return of Colonel Schlessinger—His Statement and Defence.

From our Own Correspondent.

SAN JUAN DEL NORTE, Sept. 23, 1857.

By the brig Ocean Bird, which leaves this port to-day, I have an opportunity of sending you the latest news from this region.

The Americans in Nicaragua have been expelled from the country by a decree of MARTINEZ and JEREZ, issued in Monagua in the fore part of this month. The decree ordered the expulsion of all those who served in the ranks of WALKER, and not only those, but nearly every American in the country, including many honest and industrious men, who have been driven out at three or four days' notice, leaving their property and interests behind. The American flag actually affords no protection to our countrymen here. Col. HARPER, the only American living in Granada, or in that part of the State, claimed to be an Englishman, in order to have security and protection. It is a humiliating reflection to an American that while citizens of petty German and Italian States live here in perfect security as to life and property, the broad banner of the Stars actually affords none at all to its subjects.

Many of the persons who have been banished the country, are known to be of worthy, honest character, and not to have been engaged in the service of Gen. WALKER. But this avails them little with the petty chiefs who rule in Nicaragua, and who are prompted to this course only by a blind hatred of our nation and people in general.

If an American remonstrates against any abuse, or threatens to complain to his Government, he is only answered with the trite sneer, that the United States never protect her citizens abroad. The least our Government can do, is to send an Envoy to protect the few Americans here, and to open the doors of this new Japan to all such honest men as may wish to enter and carry on any peaceful employment.

A report has reached me that our special envoy, Mr. JOHN CARRY JONES, had been sent out of Costa Rica by order of President MORA; he being looked upon as possessing fillibustering tendencies. It is quite probable that the animosity those people feel towards us may have led them to commit this imprudent act.

The election in Nicaragua was to have taken place on the 26th inst., and MARTINEZ has probably been elected. MARTINEZ is a man of little education, but of a stern, unyielding character, and displays more largely than any one else the general animosity to Americans.

It is expected in the interior that WALKER will again invade Nicaragua, and great preparations are being made to receive him. A decree has been published, forbidding all natives of the country to leave, and ordering all able-bodied men, between fifteen and sixty, to hold themselves in readiness to take up arms in case of an invasion.

Nicaragua has many resources, her people are generally well united, and with such a stern, inflexible fellow as MARTINEZ for their chief, blood will flow in torrents before WALKER will succeed in taking away the independence of the people. Besides, the other Central American States are on the alert, and an alliance has been formed with two or three of the South American States, who are to lend aid in case of another invasion of the country.

I do not believe that a force under 10,000 men would be sufficient to maintain WALKER in the country. If a smaller force is brought, it will only be for their speedy destruction. Let it be remembered that over 4,000 men were lost by WALKER when fighting against the Central American States—scattered, disunited. How much greater now must be the expenditure of blood before conquest will perch upon the arms of the Fillibuster Chief. Let not young and inexperienced men calculate too easily upon what the game will cost, and find their mistake only when it is too late, as did the thousands of poor fellows whose bones, picked by vultures and gnawed by dogs, lie bleached and sunburned on the soil of Nicaragua.

From the other States there is little news, except that extensive preparations are going on for war. The cholera had ceased its ravages in Guatemala, but not until it had numbered among its victims the wife of President CARRERA. Gen. BELLOSA, late General-in-Chief of the allied armies in Nicaragua, had also died of the pestilence in San Salvador.

Granada is rapidly rising from its ruins, and if one year of peace and tranquillity were now to ensue, it would be brought, by the industry of the people, almost to its former position; only its time-honored temples of religion, those magnificent labors of the early apostles on this continent, will not be quickly replaced. It is a sad feeling, one allied, moreover, with shame, that the American wanderer among the ruined shrines and homes of Granada must remember that all this devastation was caused by his own countrymen, the boasted civilizers and progressives of the age.

Among the passengers by the Ocean Bird, to-day, is Col. LOUIS SCHLESSINGER—he of Costa Rican memory. He, it is said, intends to publish shortly an account of the Nicaraguan revolution, and some facts with regard to the Santa Rosa affair. He is, it is also said, charged with negotiations, relative to the Transit, by the Nicaraguan Government. NICARAGUA.

INTERESTING STATEMENT BY COLONEL SCHLESSINGER.

THE LATE ELECTION IN NICARAGUA—DECREE OF EXPULSION AGAINST FOREIGNERS—PRESENT DISPOSITION OF THE NICARAGUAN FORCES, &C.

Col. SCHLESSINGER has just returned from Nicaragua, and has furnished us with some important information upon the present condition of affairs in that country.

This gentleman, it is known, was an officer under WALKER and commanded at Santa Rosa.

Col. SCHLESSINGER is a Hungarian, and was in the army under KOSSUTH. After the capitulation of Comorn, at which he was present, he came to the United States with Gov. UJHAZY, and shortly afterwards joined the expedition to Cuba, under LOPEZ. He was captured in the mountains of Cuba, having lived a week on roots; and after the garroting of LOPEZ, he was condemned to be sent to Ceuta, in Africa. He escaped, however, from his confinement there and returned to the United States, and soon after got himself into difficulty in Nicaragua.

He defends himself from the charges brought against him by WALKER in a letter which we publish below.

Colonel SCHLESSINGER reports that, at the election held in Nicaragua on the 26th ult., General MARTINEZ was elected by an overwhelming vote. He was the joint candidate of the Legislatists and Democrats. MARTINEZ is a man of liberal principles, and of undoubted decision and bravery, and popular with the masses.

There were but few Americans expelled from Nicaragua and Costa Rica under the late decree. Those expelled were parties friendly to WALKER, and who would rush to his aid should he return with a military expedition. A free passage was given to the expelled to San Juan.

The following, dated at Managua, seat of Government of Nicaragua, Sept. 5, is the DECREE OF EXPULSION.

Having received positive news that an expedition is preparing itself in the United States of America against this country, the Supreme Government decrees:

1. All foreigners, without exception, will justify before the military Governors of the Departments his actual occupation.

2. All those who were in the army of WILLIAM WALKER, or in any way connected with him, will leave this Territory within fifteen days from the date of this decree.

3. But the military commanders have power to grant them a leave of stay, provided their conduct does not render their longer residence hazardous to the interests of the country. The military Governors of the departments are charged with the execution of this decree.

Signed for the State of Nicaragua.

JEREZ.
MARTINEZ.

CORTEZ, Minister of War.

The foregoing decree, in substance, was issued by the Government of Costa Rica about the middle of August, through President MORA, with a request that it would be adopted by the other Central American States.

In relation to the defensive preparations against another fillibustering invasion, Col. SCHLESSINGER reports that an order had been issued by the Nicaraguan Government, calling upon all the male population, between 16 and 50 years, to arm themselves and be ready for active service at a moment's warning. In this connection the subjoined information is interesting and important.

The present force of Nicaragua in active service, with their disposition, and the number of guns at their disposal, is as follows:

Castillo, River San Juan, 200—6 guns.
San Carlos, 175—4 guns.
La Virgin, none.
San Juan del Sur, 175—2 guns.
Rivas 150 men.
Granada 250 men.
Masaya 75 men.
Managua, seat of Government, 300—2 guns.
Leon 240 men.
Altille 100—18 pieces.
Realejo 45 men.
Chinandeya 75 men.
Chontales 45.
Matagalpa 600 Indians.
Segovia 250.
Total, 2,680 men and 26 guns.

An army of 1,000 men can be put in motion at any point in Nicaragua in three days. Persons well acquainted with the feeling of the native population deny, most emphatically, that WALKER has a sympathizer in the whole country. It is not true that Gen. PINEDA and Col. RAYMUNDA SELVA were sent, as prisoners, to work on the roads at Matagalpa. They were both banished from the country.

COLONEL SCHLESINGER'S DEFENCE.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

NEW-YORK, Saturday, Oct. 24, 1857.

There are sometimes, by a strange coincidence, a combination of circumstances which makes it an easy task for the base calumniator to bias the public mind against the victim he chooses. Often again, those higher in power or position, for the purpose of covering their own infamy, and escaping the deserts of their criminality, succeed in loading with unmerited contempt those whom accident may have associated with them as their subordinates. Unscrupulous speculators, also, fearing that their prey may escape their grasp if the truth be told, combine with the first named to destroy the good reputation, and even the honor of individuals. Such, almost, has been my fate. I say almost, because when chance spares, amid thousands of dangers human life, in a country where the Press is free, the opportunity is offered to the individual assailed to justify his conduct.

First, it was asserted that I cowardly left the battle-field at Santa Rosa; and next, that I was in concert with the enemy, and consequently a traitor. Both these assertions are false, and are as base as the inventor of them. It would be too long a task to intrude upon the columns of a newspaper voluminous facts to prove the contrary. I will shortly publish my Memoirs on Nicaragua. In them I will submit my acts to the judgment of the impartial. Meantime, I may be allowed to assert that I will prove that I did more at Santa Rosa than any other commander, under similar circumstances, could have done, and that I was paid for it by the blackest ingratitude. It is true I abandoned WALKER, but never did I part with the glorious principles of Freedom and true Democracy. For these I fought and become an exile from Hungary in 1848; for the same principles I bled in Cuba, and suffered in the dungeons of Ceuta; I shall prove that the standard of WALKER in Nicaragua was one of personal ambition, based upon no principles of honor or justice; that WALKER did not intend to Americanize that country, nor did he ever dream of anexation; that his whole aim was to become the founder of a military confederacy, despotic in its origin, tyrannical in progress, and intended to be united with the Southern States or California as a separate confederacy. I here speak of WALKER'S political faith in April, 1856. Circumstances may have forced him to abandon these night-mare visions, but these were then his plans. I expect innumerable assailants in my present position before the public, but truth will enable me to brave the storm.

I will never allow that it may be said that a Hungarian did forego his political principles,—or still worse, that he became a traitor. It is to myself, to my country, to my friends and numerous acquaintances, that I owe it to defend what all men hold dear, and though with unequal weapons, I will fight the battle of justice against falsehood.

The public, I know, must have been influenced by the publications of these incessant calumnies, but I shall beg them to suspend their final sentence until they have read the defence. I will call it defence—though more properly I should call it a statement of the truth, which will be published shortly.

LOUIS SCHLESINGER.

News from Campeachy.

CONTINUANCE OF HOSTILITIES—DREADFUL OUTRAGES BY THE INDIANS—SLAUGHTER OF MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

By the brig Mountain Eagle, Capt. MILLIKEN, from Sisal, we have dates to the 26th September.

The Campeachy armed brig Union was still sailing back and forth in the port of Sisal. There had been no exchange of shots between the fort and her for some days. The forces of the belligerents were at a short distance from Campeachy, but doing nothing. The schooner that had been armed by Campeachy had laid down her arms and sailed for New-Orleans on her regular business.

The Indians in the interior, taking advantage of the disturbances, entered a village some sixty miles from Merida with friendly manifestations, and having gained admission to the houses, commenced to slaughter the men, women and children, indiscriminately, and very few escaped. More than five hundred bodies had been found, and more were being discovered daily in the woods, where they had attempted to escape, overtaken and murdered, many of them mutilated in the most shocking manner. This occurred about the middle of September.

Twenty-five Mile Race.

The trotting match between the Taylor and Dalton horses, Doctor and Broker, at Bridgeport, Conn., on Friday last, was won by the Dalton horse, in 1 hour, 32 minutes and 36 seconds. The Taylor horse broke badly during the race, and on the last homestretch ran by the other, coming in a neck ahead. His running, however, disqualified him for taking the purse, and the judges decided in favor of Broker. The two kept very near together during the whole race, and divided the half miles about equally. Their first half mile was made in 1:45; their last in 1:43; while the least time was 1:39, and the longest 2:01. Mr. DALTON stopped his horse three times for rest, but the other kept on the track from the start to the close.

The New Election Law—Order of Canvassing the Votes.

There will be six ballot boxes used at each election district in this City at the coming State Election, which takes place one week from next Tuesday, and the votes in each will be counted in the following order.

First—Box No. 2.—This box contains the State ticket, headed by the names of the candidates for the office of Secretary of State.

Second—Box No. 4.—This box contains the names of the candidates for the office of State Senator.

Third—Box No. 5.—This box contains the names of the candidates for the office of Member of Assembly.

Fourth—Box No 6.—This box contains the names of the candidates for the offices of Register and District-Attorney.

Fifth—Box No. 8.—This box contains the names of the candidates for the office of Judge of the Court of appeals, Justices of the Supreme Court, Justices of the Superior Court, Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, Justice of the Marine Court, Surrogate and Recorder.

Sixth—Box for the votes for Inspectors and District Canvassers.

At the completion of the canvass of each box, in accordance with the requirements of the law, the chairman of the canvassers of the election will make public oral proclamation of the whole number of votes given for each person, with the name of the office to which such person was named on the ballot. The following are the number of FIVE HIGHWAY ROBBERS ARRESTED.—Patrick Gallagher, John Bray, Philip Maguire, John Kavenah and Edward Maguire, were arrested late Friday evening in the Eighteenth Ward, charged with being the parties who, on the 16th of last September attacked David Voorhes and John Wray at the corner of Fourth-avenue and Twentieth-street, and after robbing them, severely beating and leaving them insensible on the pavement. The officers of the Eighteenth Ward have ever since the robbery been on the look-out, but were unable to get on their track till Friday evening. The accused belong to a gang known as the "Mackerelville Crowd," a desperate set of rowdies whose headquarters are in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Wards. The officers expect to-day to arrest more of the same gang. The accused parties have been committed for examination.

The Bright Side of Calamity.

However disastrous, in a general sense, these tight times may be, they afford fine opportunities to that class of purchasers who have cash in hand wherewith to procure the comforts and luxuries of life. The bursting of an expanded credit system is to them not a calamity, but a gain; and as thousands were wise enough, even in the late era of extravagance, to provide for a rainy day, there is a very fair percentage of contented people, who, however much they may sympathize with their improvident neighbors, have no personal reasons for joining in the general croak.

If the reader feels at all inclined to doubt the existence of such a class, we recommend him to pay a visit, at any time during business hours, to the extensive clothing warehouse of Messrs. DEVLIN & Co. He will there see crowds of bustling worldly-minded individuals, purchasing right and left from a superb stock of Fall and Winter ready-made clothing and furnishing goods, the prices of which have judiciously and unmurmuringly been marked down to first cost and under.

This eminent house has probably now on hand half a million dollars' worth of elegant apparel, and without any wry faces the firm is quietly making extraordinary sales at a positive and direct loss. We believe DEVLIN & Co. may be ranked among the moral aristocracy of the mercantile world who have never stooped to any artful dodges in their business transactions. Hence their proposition to sell at cost is received by the public as bona fide; and gentlemen who like to dress fashionably, but are averse to fashionable prices, flock to a market in which extortion was never practiced, and which in a period of commercial gloom offers remarkable inducements and advantages to economists.

As the lowest point of depression has now probably been reached, and a rebound may be anticipated, we advise those who have "cash and sense" to avail themselves of present opportunities.—Sunday Dispatch.

PURDY'S NATIONAL THEATRE.—To-night another sterling entertainment is to be given at this prosperous place of amusement. COBB'S dramatic story of "Bion the Wanderer" is to be performed for the last time. A new drama is to be presented, called "The Warning Hand; or, The Statue Lover," and a new farce also, for the first time, called "Yankee Courting." An olio of dancing, singing, &c. Mr. ALLEN, Mr. FOX, Mrs. H. F. NICHOLS, Miss HATHAWAY and Miss DALY appear, with the whole company.

☞ HOLLOWAY'S Pills are admitted to be the greatest alterative medicine in the world. Their effect upon the system is not violent, but mild and painless, and the facility with which they regulate the disordered stomach and bowels, and restore the animal fluid to a healthy, life-sustaining condition, places them immeasurably in advance of all other internal remedies.

HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION FIRE-PROOF SAFES.—Nos. 135, 137 and 139 Water-street, and No. 251 Broadway, corner Murray-street, New-York.

LONG ISLAND.

SETTLED.—In the Sixth Assembly District in Brooklyn the Democracy placed in nomination two candidates: EDWARD DRIGGS and JOHN HANFORD. Mr. DRIGGS withdrew, and leaves a clear field for Mr. HANFORD.

HEAVY VERDICT.—In the City Court of Brooklyn, on Saturday, a Jury rendered a verdict of $7,250 in favor of F. MEYERS against the City of Brooklyn, for damages sustained by MEYERS being thrown out of a wagon on Flushing-avenue, where the City had neglected to keep it in repair.

☞ Only ninety-five persons were naturalized in the City Court of Brooklyn during the months of September and October.

BURGLARS.—Several burglaries were committed in Brooklyn on Saturday night last. Two provision stores were robbed and a bakery.

BROOKLYN BOARD OF HEALTH.—This Board expended during the past season $639 01. But few meetings were held, and no business of importance was transacted during the Summer.

NEW-JERSEY.

THE TRIAL OF CUEVA, the young Spaniard, for the murder of OSCAR DE GRANDVAL, of Hoboken, will be commenced in the Hudson County Court, Judge OGDEN presiding, this (Monday) morning. The case will be conducted for the State by Attorney General DAYTON and Prosecuting Attorney LITTLE. The Counsel for the prisoner are Messrs. SCUDDER and ZABRISKIE, of Jersey city. It is expected that the trial will consume most of the week.

HUDSON COUNTY ASSEMBLY NOMINATIONS.—The Democratic Assembly Convention for the First District of Hudson County, comprising Hoboken and the Fourth Ward of Jersey City, was held at the Town Hall in Hoboken on Saturday evening, and resulted in the renomination of ROBT. C. BACOT, of the Fourth Ward, by a unanimous vote.

The Democratic Convention for the Third Assembly District, embracing North Bergen, Hudson City, Bergen and Harrison, was held at Mortimore's Hotel, in Hudson City, on Friday evening, and put in nomination JACOB M. VREELAND, of Bergen. Mr. VREELAND has heretofore served one term in the Legislature.

The Republican County Convention is to be held at Carpenter's Hotel, in Hudson City, on Wednesday next. The candidates for Assembly will also be nominated at this Convention.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

S. C. HERRING & CO.'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES.—The subscribers, grateful for past favors, and finding that a discriminating public were bestowing their patronage to that extent that more warerooms were necessary to exhibit all their stock, have enlarged their depôt, by opening an extensive ware and sales room on Broadway, at No. 251, corner of Murray-st., opposite the City Hall. This enlargement of warehouse room, with the recent extensive enlargement of their factory, will enable the subscribers to keep on hand at all times a larger stock of fire and burglar-proof safes than any other establishment in the world. Particular attention will be had to constructing safes for private families to match with other furniture, for the security of plate and jewelry, (and housekeepers are invited to call and examine for themselves.) Also, will keep on hand and make to order, all kinds of money chests, vault doors and bank vaults, Hall's patent powder-proof locks for banks or store doors, Jones' patent permutation bank lock, and Grygier's patent letter lock, without key.

S. C. HERRING & CO.,
Nos. 135, 137 and 139 Water-st., and
No. 251 Broadway, cor. Murray-st., New-York.

WAUPUN, Wis., Aug. 24, 1857.

Mr. LANSING BONNELL, Milwaukie,
Agent for Herring & Co.'s Patent Safes.

DEAR SIR: The Herring Champion Safe that I purchased of you, was in my store at the time it was burned last March. The heat was so great that it melted off the brass plates and knob on the front of the safe. The door was warped so badly from the heat, that I was obliged to cut it open. But I am happy to say to you, the contents of the safe were preserved to my perfect satisfaction.

Y. C. SNOW.

THIS IS THE DAY SET APART BY MESSRS. DAILEY & CO., Nos. 631 and 633 Broadway, upon which to commence their great closing-out sale. We also advise all of our housekeeping friends to improve the present opportunity, and buy enough China, Glass, and so on, to last them for a year. Turn to the Dry Good's column of this paper, and see the price list of Messrs. D. & Co.

LOAN FOR $500,000 FOR THE DEFICIENCY in the Sinking Fund, under Section 3, Article 7, of the Constitution.
The Commissioners of the Canal Fund, by virtue of the act entitled "An act to provide means to support the Government," passed April 12, 1855, and in accordance with Section 3 of Article 7 of the Constitution, hereby give notice, that sealed proposals will be received at the Canal Department until the 10th day of November next, at 12 o'clock noon of that day, for a loan of FIVE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS, for which transferable certificates of stock will be issued in the name of the people of the State of New-York, on the credit of the Sinking Fund, under Section 3, Article 7, of the Constitution, bearing interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, payable quarterly, on the first days of January, April, July, and October, in each year, and the principal reimbursable on the 1st day of October, 1875. It is to be understood that the Commissioners are to be at liberty to take a less sum, if the offers are not such as in their opinion are advantageous to the interest of the State. The proposals may be for the whole or any part of said loan, not less than $5,000. All proposals to be sealed up, and indorsed "Loan for the Sinking Fund," and inclosed in an envelope, directed to the Auditor of the Canal Department, Albany.
The money will be required to be paid, five per cent. on the acceptance of the proposal, and the balance on the 16th day of November next.
Payments to be made by depositing the same to the credit of the "Treasurer of the State on account of the Canal Fund," in the Manhattan Company, New-York, or in the New-York State Bank, in the city of Albany. Interest on the loan will commence on the 16th day of November next, and the holders of the stock residing in the First and Second Judicial Districts, and those residing out of the State, will receive the interest on the Stocks held by them, quarterly, at the Manhattan Company, in the City of New-York; and all other Stockholders at the New-York State Bank, in the city of Albany. Dated, Albany, Oct. 16, 1857.
H. R. SELDEN, Lieut. Governor.
LORENZO BURROWS, Comptroller.
JOEL T. HEADLEY, Sec'y of State.
STEPHEN CLARK, Treasurer.

NEW-YORK AND ERIE RAILROAD COMPANY.—OFFICE NEW-YORK AND ERIE RAILROAD COMPANY, NEW-YORK, Oct. 23, 1857.—CIRCULAR.—Subscriptions will be received at the office of the New York and Erie Railroad Company, in the City of New-York, for the purchase of $6,000,000 of the Bonds of the Company, redeemable on the 1st of October, 1880, bearing 7 per cent. interest, payable semi-annually, on the first days of April and October.
They will be issued at par, payable as follows:
One-half in any of the Unsecured Bonds of the Company, redeemable in 1862, 1871, 1875.
One-half in cash, payable in monthly installments of 10 per cent.
All indebtedness against the Company, matured or unmatured, including all coupons, whether on secured or unsecured bonds, due previous to 1st of October, 1858, will be received in lieu of the cash installments.
All parties who wish any variations of the time of the cash payments may state their own terms, which can probably be accepted by the Company if the subscription reaches a certain amount.
All parties holding the indebtedness of the Company, matured or not matured, may at once exchange it for the new mortgage bonds at par.
Subscriptions will also be received for Loans to the Company, to be reimbursed out of the proceeds of the above bonds. Receipts, bearing 7 per cent. interest, will be given for these loans, and they will be secured by the deposit, in the hands of the United States Trust Company, of double the amount of the above mortgage bonds.
The above are modifications of the original terms proposed by the circular of 17th August, 1857.
CHARLES MORAN, President.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

T. H. CHAMBERS, PIANO MANUFACTURER,
Nos. 8 and 10 Bible House, Astor place, corner 8th-st and 4th-av. (Formerly DUBOIS & STODART and DUBOIS, BACON & CHAMBERS.) The oldest establishment, and a reliable place to purchase.

A PRIVATE FAMILY IN BROOKLYN have a costly double-round 7-octave rosewood piano and stool, new four months ago, and cost them $500, and willing to sell it at a great sacrifice for cash: it is a truly superb and richly-finished instrument, is without spot or blemish, and equal to new. City-made, rich, brilliant tone, having carved legs, finished back like the front, fully warranted. Price $265 for piano and stool. A bargain, and no exaggeration. Apply at No. 70 Washington-st., near Front, Brooklyn, three minutes' walk from Fulton Ferry, any time after 7 A. M.

GOLD MEDAL PIANOS.—STEINWAY & SONS, Nos. 82 and 84 Walker-sts., near Broadway, New-York, manufacturers of Grand and Square Pianos, with Patent Repetition Action, have taken the First Premium over those of the best makers of Boston, New-York, Philadelphia and Baltimore. Among the Judges were GOTTSCHALK, MASON and WOLLENHAUPT.
Warranted fully for three years. Prices moderate.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN PIANOFORTES.—Messrs. LIGHTE, NEWTON & BRADBURYS, No. 421 Broome-st., respectfully invite attention to their Piano-fortes, constructed with the patent arch wrest-plank, which is undoubtedly the most substantial improvement ever introduced into this instrument.

COMMENTS ON THE INDIAN NEWS.

From the London Times, Oct. 13.

Another mail has come, and then another mail upon it, with news from every quarter of the disturbed provinces, and with a most gratifying announcement, very late indeed, from the garrison of Lucknow, though without informing us of any substantial change in the position and prospects of the war. We at home are indeed better pleased to hear that that garrison was safe on the 2d ult., less than six weeks ago, that it had made a second successful sortie, capturing two guns, and bringing in a large supply of provisions, and that there was good hope of their relief in the middle of the month, than we should have been to hear of another glorious, but unprofitable victory, in the open field. Elsewhere, though the end is not yet, everything is tending to it. Indeed, no historian, no dramatist, no poet ever so suspended the interest, so spun out the preparations, and kept the antagonists so long on the start, as is done by the natural course of events in this war. Time is now in our favor; we everywhere hold out, preserve, gain courage and confidence, are reinforced from the mountains or the ocean, and grow continually more and more terrible in the eyes of the foe. To the arrivals from the Punjab, from Nepaul, from Madras, China and Ceylon, we may now add whole regiments from the Cape, and the head of the great column from this country. The arrival of 2,500 troops at Mauritius is an earnest of what we may now hope for every week. Yet the work is still all to come. On all sides it is the note of preparation, the catalogue of the forces, the gathering of the hosts—nothing complete, critical and decisive. The siege train was still to arrive at Delhi, and the assault was then to be made. This was indeed no illusion. On the contrary, the mutineers, having gone out from Delhi to intercept the dreaded messengers of their doom, suffered a great loss of men, guns and baggage. Everywhere it is the same. We are face to face with one another at a hundred points, collecting strength and maturing our plans. Whichever side tempts a collision, the triumph is uniformly ours, as if to assure the mutineers that they must wait their trial and then their doom. Our people have gone out from Agra in force, and routed a body of the insurgents. Major EYRE has again defeated the mutineers from Dinapore. Fresh, but not unexpected mutinies in the Punjab, have been speedily extinguished. Thus the intelligence is throughout far more satisfactory and hopeful than we could have ventured to expect, and it is impossible not to feel that we have now broken the back of this terrible affair. Nevertheless, there is peculiarity in the news before us—that it leaves the two sides much where it found them—that is, nearly in the same position and in the same force, with no fortress captured, no territory won, no army destroyed. Though the rebels were everywhere beaten, there they still were; and at the very time that OUTRAM was advancing from Allahabad to Cawnpore it was said that the former place, as well as Benares, was threatened by the insurgents of Oude.

The real change is that, while recovering ourselves, uniting, and slowly augmenting the small bands that have hitherto waged unequal war with the hosts around them, those hosts are themselves melting away. They are not like the smoke of the genie that took form and substance and became a giant; they only rise to evaporate. They may be said to be without form and void. A common cause they cannot have, as the Hindoos can only coöperate with the Mussulmans, and the Mussulmans with the Hindoos, with the secret intention of getting rid of the other at the first convenient opportunity. There has been no manifesto, except a story of greased cartridges, which none believed, and the proclamation of a King whom none respected. There has been no general excuse NENA SAHIB, for the names mentioned at Delhi are those of humble men, and change from day to day. There has been no plan of operation, except that they who don't know what else to do flock to Delhi, where they are not always comfortable or welcome—where, indeed, they don't always stay. It is true that we hear of the mutineers everywhere; we may encounter them everywhere; but everywhere they are scattered and dissipated, to turn up somewhere else. At this moment it would not be safe to say that the insurgents of Oude are not on their way to Delhi, or that the garrison of Delhi is not on its way to Oude. The insurgents of Oude also threaten Allahabad and Benares. The mutineers of Dinapore diffused an extensive panic down the river, but have been beaten twice higher up. Thus the foe we have to deal with—nameless, causeless, pointless, and aimless—is desultory as a vapor, shallow as an inundation. Never was anything of such formidable dimensions so destitute of consistency. A great people or a great cause will in time find a great General, and so win the day. But, even if the Sepoys should have the luck to find a great soldier, they have not in themselves what he could take hold of. He might as well attempt to grasp a mist, or to command a shoal of herrings. Their faint traditional loyalty to some names and sites would afford but slight groundwork for discipline or government. The weak, listless, vaporing throng would resent efficient command as a worse bondage than the old one. So little solidity or principle is observed in the mutineers, and so little power of turning their opportunities to account, that it has been thought not improbable they will all disperse on the arrival of our reinforcements, or proffer their submission. They may not take either of these courses, for they may not be able to do the one, or have encouragement to do the other; but it is confidently expected that they will make no stand.

Does not this prove the worthlessness of their cause, and the justice of ours? If they have a righteous quarrel, what is it? If they have any principle of unity, why does it not appear? If they have great names, stifled heroism, crushed nobility, or any other good thing that we have not acknowledged, now is the time for it to be seen. Yet, there is nothing of the sort. The only displays of anything like enthusiasm have been of the most atrocious character—a Delhi, Jhansi, Cawnpore, and several other places where massacres have been perpetrated. Here the fire has broken out, and there is at least earnestness. Here they must have a real quarrel with us. Then, what is it? At these places the grievance is an assumption of the sovereign rights of certain native Princes. This, in the abstract, is a fair quarrel enough, though, in fact, we have only used the common right of war, or taken the forfeit of broken treaties, or interfered for the common good, in support of order against anarchy and outrage, add no sooner than was necessary. But it is enough that we are not at war anywhere with the people. We are not at war with the country round Delhi, or even with the general inhabitants of Delhi. We are not at war with any country, even with Oude. The garrison of Lucknow no sooner broke through the circle of their besiegers than they found the resources of the country at their disposal. We are only at war with a definite number of regiments of idle and pampered soldiers, with certain pretenders and their armed bands, who have profited by the disturbance, or been drawn into it, and with a few, very few, mere fanatics and enthusiasts animated by a religious zeal. Thus, on the whole, there is an utter want of that common cause, that sense of justice, that nationality, or that religion, which in other instances has bonded myriads into a successful or desperate resistance to the invader or the oppressor. We have against us a disunited crowd, which has renounced its flag in sheer restlessness and wantonness. Like a silly truant, it has taken a holiday, and knows not what to do with it. It is now at large, and only experiences the miseries of liberty without principle. It encounters us every now and then, but without heart, and therefore without success. It flies because it cannot stand before us; it reassembles round its flags because it has nowhere else to go to, and is waylaid and robbed by the very villagers; it returns to the war because it has nothing else to do. That, indeed, will be its course, and the natural death of the mutiny. Every Sepoy fights with a halter round his neck; he knows it; yet he cannot but fight and be beaten.

Captain White's Moose, 3 yrs., 5 st. 1 lb., (Perry.)
Mr. King's Wild Honey, 3 yrs., 4 st. 10 lbs., (Daley.)

Betting at starting: 4 to 1 against M. Dobler, 8 to 1 against El Hakim, 12 to 1 against Warlock, 100 to 8 against Lima, 100 to 7 against Rosati, 15 to 1 against Plush colt, 20 to 1 against Martinet, 20 to 1 against Tasmania, 25 to 1 against Emulator, 30 to 1 against Queen Bess, 33 to 1 each against Fright, Zigzag and Fisherman, 40 to 1 against Poodle, 50 to 1 each against Barfleur, December and Dusty Miller, 60 to 1 each against Eloquence and St. Giles, 100 to 1 each against Prioress and Sluggard.

The flag was dropped to a beautiful start. Dusty Miller bore his colors to the front, with Queen Bess, Cerva, M. Dobler, and the Plush Colt following nearly in the order named, Odd Trick, Fright, Emulator, Zigzag, Warlock, Princess and Poodle lying in the middle of the ruck. These positions were unchanged until reaching the ditch, when Cerva rushed to the front, Queen Bess being in close attendance upon her, with Odd Trick third, Emulator, El Hakim, Prioress, Fright, Zigzag, Warlock and the Plush Colt forming the next lot. At the Bushes the pace began to tell, and Warlock, Plush Colt, and Poodle dropped back, and Cerva resigned the lead to Queen Bess. As they descended the hill, Odd Trick, Emulator and Zigzag also disappeared from the front. On approaching the cords Queen Bess, with El Hakim at her neck, still held a slight lead, with Prioress running by herself on the far side third, Fright, Zigzag, Warlock and Emulator showing in front of the ruck. One of the most exciting Cesarewitch finishes ever seen then ensued. Prioress half way up the cords seemed to be about coming in alone, but the tiny jockeys of El Hakim and Queen Bess made a determined set to, and the judge unable to separate the first three pronounced a dead heat with Prioress, Queen Bess, and El Hakim; Fright was next about a length and-a-half behind them Zigzag was fifth, about a length in advance of Warlock, who was sixth, and Martinet seventh; Emulator and Saunterer headed the next lot that straggled in. In the extreme rear, pulled up, were St. Giles, Wild Honey, Poodle, Fisherman, Black Tommy and the Poacher.

DECIDING HEAT.

Mr. R. Ten Broeck's Prioress, by Sovereign, (bred in America,) 4 yrs. 6 st. 9 lbs. (Fordham) 1
Captain Smith's El Hakim, 3 yrs. 6 st. 9 lbs. (Bray) 2
Mr. Saxon's Queen Bess, 3 yrs., 4 st. 10 lbs. (Grimshaw) 3

Betting—5 to 4 against El Hakim, 2 to 1 against Prioress, 3 to 1 against Queen Bess.

The "heat" was run after the last race in a deepening twilight, which rendered it impossible to distinguish the colors of the riders at a distance. El Hakim was first off, but after going about 50 yards Prioress, overpowering Fordham, rushed to the front, and carried on the running to the ditch gap, where she was pulled back, and lay about three lengths in the rear, Queen Bess going on with the lead, closely attended by El Hakim. On coming down the bushes hill Prioress hung to the left, and a shout was raised of "the American's beaten!" But Fordham roused the mare with his whip, and before reaching the foot of the hill she bore her colors in advance, and quitting her opponents half-way up the cords won cleverly by a length-and-a-half; El Hakim beating Queen Bess by a head only for second place. A loud and prolonged cheer hailed the triumph of the American colors, and Mr. Ten Broeck was warmly congratulated upon the first victory achieved by him in England. An objection was made by the rider of Queen Bess against the rider of El Hakim, on the ground of a cross.

Wreck of American Vessels, with Loss of Life, on the British Coast.

LOSS OF THE BOSTON BARK WARDEN AND SEVEN LIVES.

Correspondence of the London Star.

BIDEFORD, Sunday, Oct. 11, 1857.

On Thursday night last, when the storm commenced, and the glass indicated danger, and the wind on shore, every preparation was made by the branch of the Royal National Life-Boat Institution for the life-boat service, (in case of need,) and a good watch and look-out was kept. It was so thick that no one could see any distance; and previous to daylight the American bark Warden, of Boston, 406 tons, with 450 of railway iron, from Newport for Havnnah, got embayed outside Baggy Point, and was totally lost on the Staunton or Braunton Sands, about two miles off the land. The Captain and three men were washed on shore on portions of the wreck, but seven of the crew were unfortunately drowned.

The wreck (literally firewood) was strewed on the the coast for many miles around.

I was early on the spot, and have provided food and ample clothing and comforts for the poor fellows saved, who are much exhausted, and wait the American consul's order for their disposal.

I find that the vessel struck, and the crew instantly took to the mizzen-mast, but that the violence of the sea shook the masts out of her, and broke her up instanter, so that if it had been daylight there was no chance of rescuing any of the poor fellows.

Our life-boat's men were ready and willing for any emergency at the time if required.

LOSS OF THL LEXINGTON AND THREE LIVES.

The following letter, addressed to Mr. TAYLOR, manager of the New Steam Tug Company, was posted at the underwriters' rooms at Liverpool.

VALENTIA, Friday, Oct. 8, 1857.

DEAR SIR: I am sorry to inform you that the Lexington is no more. We left this harbor at 11¾ A. M., wind N., fresh breeze, and rising glass. All went on well until after we got round Bray Head, when it came on to blow a gale from the N. W., with very heavy sea, and engine working at slow speed, for the west passage for Valentine Harbor, engines working dead slow, the rope parted at the ship's hawse-pipe. It was then impossible to get fast to her again; by the time we could get the hawser in the ship would be on the rocks and all hands perished. I ran to leeward, and got thirteen hands on board. I got the life-boat out. Mr. BREWSTER (mate) and the boy, GODFREY volunteered. They were in the boat for some time, but, not able to get at the ship, I got them on board, made another run at the weather-side of the ship; and, amidst a terrific sea running, we succeeded in getting one man. Lines were thrown on board, but the other poor fellows seemed to be bewildered, and were unable to make the ropes fast to themselves and jump overboard. We were then so close to the rocks that the hands saved begged for me to back out. The life-boat I lost, and very thankful to get clear so well. We got, besides, some damage to our port-quarter in getting the men saved from the ship. I am afraid three men are drowned, but there may be some hopes; the ship went in at the back of Saswell Rock, and disappeared from us. The gale still increasing, I put back to Valentia. I should have telegraphed you last evening, but, going on shore, something had happened to the wires. The ship went on about 3½ o'clock P. M. on Puffin Island, (St. Finan Bay.) It is blowing a gale from the Northwest. I shall have to get some fuel as soon as the weather will permit, and will lose no time in getting home.

Your obedient servant, JOHN HARVEY,
Master of the steam-tug Resolute.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LIVERPOOL, Wednesday, Oct. 14.

COTTON—The market opened buoyant, and a speculative demand sprung up under the advices by the Persia, but upon the advance of the rates of discount by the Bank of England, the market became dull, and closed quietly at the rates advised per Europa. The sales of the three days amounted to about 19,000 bales,—including some 7,000 to speculators and 1,000 to exporters,

At Manchester business was almost suspended, and prices were nominal. Where sales were made previous rates were obtained.

BREADSTUFFS—Messrs. RICHARDSON, SPENCE & Co., RICHARDSON BROTHERS and others report a generally dull market. Flour slow of sale at a decline of 6d. per bbl., except on choice lots, which were scarce and firm. Western Canal 30s.@30s. 6d.; Ohio, 32s.@33s. Wheat in moderate demand at 1d.@2d. decline on red and 2d.@3d. on white. Red quoted at 7s. 6d.@8s.; white, 8s. 9d.@9s., and 9s. 3d. for choice. Indian Corn in fair request at 36s. 6d.@37s. per quarter for mixed; 37s. 6d. for yellow and 41s.@42s. for white.

PROVISIONS—Beef quiet and unchanged, but tending downward. Pork dull. Bacon in limited demand at steady prices. Lard very dull. No sales of importance. Tallow dull and quotations nominal. Messrs. BIGLAND, ATHYA & Co., report a considerable improvement in Lard—small sales at 71s.

PRODUCE—Ashes dull at 42s. for Pots, and 41s. for Pearls. Spirits of Turpentine—small sales at 38s. 6d.@39s. Resin in fair demand at 4s. 6d.@4s. 7d. for Common. Nothing doing in Oils. Sugar dull. Coffee steady. Rice quiet. Bark—Philadelphia nominal at 11s. 6d.; sales of Baltimore at 9s. 6d.@10s. Wool irregular and rather lower.

London Produce Market.

BREADSTUFFS dull, and WHEAT 2s. cheaper. SUGAR very dull and 2s.@3s. lower. At the auction sales nearly all was withdrawn. COFFEE firm. TEA inactive. RICE dull. SALTPETER 2s. lower. INDIGO—The quarterly sales were in progress, and a fair spirit prevailed; prices were 1s.@2s. in advance of the July rates, but not quite so high as those prevailing before the sale. TALLOW easier—selling at 57s.@57s. 3d. for Y. C. LINSEED OIL nominal. Scotch Pig IRON 62s.@62s. 6d.

London Money Market.

On Saturday (the day the Europa sailed) an excessive demand prevailed for money, caused by the unfavorable nature of the American advices by the Persia, and the apprehension of a further rise in the Bank rates. On Monday morning the Bank Directors held a meeting, and before eleven o'clock announced a further rise of one per cent. in their minimum rate of discount—that is, they advanced the rate from 6 to 7 per cent., both for the discount of mercantile bills and loans on stock. Consols rapidly fell under this movement to 87¼—a decline during the day of no less than 1½ per cent. On Tuesday, Consols went as low as 86¾, but subsequently rallied and closed firmly at 87⅜@87¾ for money and account. Railway and other securities participated in the downward movement, but not to the same extent as Consols. The Bank of Ireland followed the example of the Bank of England and advanced its rates to 7 per cent. At Hamburg the rates of discount had advanced to 7¾ per cent., and similar movements were in progress in other Continental cities.

The extent of the applications to the Bank for accommodation continued extraordinary on Tuesday under the anticipation of a further advance in rates, but on the whole, says the Times, the day may be considered to have passed satisfactorily. The gold withdrawals from the Bank were light, as specie remittances could not be made to the United States at any material profit.

The failure of Ross, MITCHELL & Co., engaged in the Canadian trade, and having a house in Toronto, was announced in London on Tuesday. Liabilities estimated at £250,000, while their assets were recently valued at about £350,000. It was thought that the suspension would be but temporary.

Four or five failures were announced from Glasgow, including J. MONTEITH & Co., large shippers of Glasgow goods to America; MACDONALD & Co. and WALLACE & Co. Two failures in London, in connection with these Scotch houses, were also reported. Estimates of the aggregate liabilities of the Glasgow firms run as high as £1,500,000, but the Times considers this an exaggeration.

The Bank of Pennsylvania had advised their London correspondents that remittances would be made with undisturbed regularity. The city article of the London Times of Oct. 12, says: "As respects the commercial losses to be sustained on this side, very heavy amounts are believed to have fallen on Lyons and Havre. Here, it is feared Manchester, Bradford, and Glasgow will suffer considerably."

Glasgow Pig Iron Market.

The market had been much depressed, but on the 13th a slight recovery took place and a good deal of business was done. 60s. was offered, but holders wanted 61s.

MONDAY, Oct. 26—A. M.

The Baltic steamship from Liverpool, Wednesday, (afternoon,) Oct. 14, arrived at this port last evening. Her financial news is important, as bringing the responses to the New-York accounts of Sept. 30, by the Persia. These accounts were the first of the fall of Exchange to par at 103 per cent. They arrived out on Saturday, Oct. 10. On the following Monday, the Court of Directors of the Bank of England met, and immediately ordered an advance of the rate of discount to 7 per cent., and the Funds fell on that and the next day as low as 86¾, recovering on Wednesday and leaving off at 2 o'clock, 88 per cent. The French Bank advanced the rate to 6½ per cent. At Hamburg the rate went to 7¾ per cent. Further India news had been received in London, with less favorable quotations of Exchange, though an improved market is advised for manufactured goods. Singular to say the Persia's advices caused a stiff market at Liverpool for Cotton. The succeeding advice from London that discounts had been advanced to 7 per cent., created a dullness, prices leaving off the same as by the Europa. Breadstuffs were somewhat lower, particularly in the London market, and Sugars gave way 2s.@3s. the cwt. In American Stocks, in London, there was some speculation going on at the reduced prices, and a paragraph in the London Times would authorize the inference of large orders, based on the expectation that the panic is to be of short continuance. On Tuesday, Oct. 13, there were sales of Illinois Central shares at 94@94¼ per cent., sterling, against quotations from New-York of 84@85 federal money, and the bid for the Bonds was 78 sterling, against sales on this side at 77 federal money. Sales of New-York and Erie shares at 17@18, against an advice of 13¼@13½, and of New-York Central at 55 against 61 per cent. on this side. The general tenor of the money speculations of the leading journal, however, show that while heavy losses to the manufacturers of Manchester and other districts in England, and to Lyons and Paris, were anticipated from the American troubles, the full measure of the financial embarrassment on this side had not been taken, nor the suspension of the New-York banks at all looked for.

The Baltic brings £72,600 sterling in Gold, equal to almost $360,000. The engagements for this steamer, and the Persia to sail the following Saturday, Oct. 17, were estimated in London at two million dollars, which, if at all near the mark, would lead to the anticipation of a million and a half by the last named steamer, due here on Wednesday. At the hour of writing we have no means of consulting the private mercantile letters by the present arrival, but the Europa brought intelligence that the English underwriters would oe more than full on the treasure to come by the Persia.

Although the ninth week of the pressure just closed, witnessed a good many additional failures or extensions of payment among the heavy merchants, and the Stock Exchange showed on Friday and Saturday a lower range of prices, the market for money was somewhat easier to dealers at bank, and there was a manifestation at most of the large banks to increase the line of accommodation, where good short paper was offered for discount. This relief, though not seen or perhaps sensibly felt in the neighborhood of Wall-street, where the gloom from the embarrassment of the great houses continues, it is important to the thousand and odd mercantile firms, trading in a moderate way, or having their business snugged up, who have not thus far yielded to the pressure or begged day on their engagements. It is important also to the produce trade from the West, on the eve of the close of Lake navigation. The difficulty with some of the banks is to find the right sort of paper upon which to put out their reserve of means. The rates of discount outside of bank are still greatly unsettled, and the confidence of money lenders in what has hitherto rated prime bills, very much impaired. The few transactions making are at 18@30 per cent. The Domestic Exchanges, even with the nearest cities, grew rather worse, though as a large portion of the returns from Baltimore, Philadelphia, &c., are made in Gold, the operation tends to keep down the value of Gold here, and to supply the remittances making to Charleston, where all the banks have not yet suspended. The brokers' quotation for Gold on Saturday was only 100¼@100¾ per cent. buyers, and 101@101¼ sellers. Philadelphia funds 93¾@94; Baltimore, 92; Richmond, 88@90; Boston, 99@99¼ per cent. The Foreign Exchanges for the Vanderbilt and the Atlantic on Saturday were higher, the pick of bills on London selling at 105 per cent. The range, however, continues wide, and sales were made at 101@103¼@105 at 60 days, and 106@106½ for bills 20@30 days to run. The feeling was less troubled on Saturday in regard to the return of bills drawn in September and early in this month on Liverpool and London. There is not the slightest probability that any of the produce bills will be refused while other bills, known as banker's, were nearly all under acceptance at the last dates, and those that have since been drawn by the suspended or weak houses, cannot amount to a very large sum in the aggregate; the utmost caution having been shown by remitters in selecting the few bills they have been able in the last three or four weeks to pay for. The most of Mr. ROBB'S bills are under acceptance by the Commercial Bank of Liverpool. It is only such as were recently drawn on the branch firm of R. HALLET, WILSON & Co., of Liverpool, that are in peril. The agents in this city of the two or three Scotch Banks and the correspondents of the London Joint Stock Banks have drawn little or nothing which was not under acceptance at the latest date. These banks are of undoubted strength. The standard banking firms who draw on PEABODY, BROWNS, DENNISTOUN, FIELDEN, and others, are under no apprehension as to their friends on the other side, nor ought the public to be, in view of their known strength, and the fact constantly made manifest to us, that the English banking and mercantile community are not so mercurial in seasons of difficulty or prosperity as our own, and far less subject to be moved in their trust and confidence in each other and in the stability of their own trade. That they will have their losses, and heavy ones, for the time being, from the state of things on this side, there is no question; but their profits have been large of late years, and their wealth is understood to be great.

The foreign trade at the port of New-York, the past week, amounted in the entries of foreign merchandise, including the dry goods table in our last paper, to $2,807,332, against $2,754,484 same week last year. The Exports of the week, of which an unusually large share was in miscellaneous articles, partly of foreign growth seeking a better market, amounted to $2,132,124, against $1,390,116 the corresponding week last year. There was no Export of Specie. The same week last year, $201,325. The receipts of Foreign Gold were $315,000, from England via Boston, and $180,000 from Havana. The Sub-Treasury balance on Saturday afternoon, stood $5,885,209, against $5,514,496 at the close of the previous week. The increase came from the Boston office in Coin by express. The actual disbursements have exceeded the ordinary Customs receipts by nearly $300,000. The Banks will probably show an increase of Specie in their statement this afternoon, and the new discounts of the past week having been confined to less than half the Banks, a further liquidation of the aggregate loan column is anticipated—$542,097 from the Grocers' Bank alone, which has gone into voluntary liquidation.

According to the Custom-House tables of the Foreign Trade for ten months of the calendar year, which we published a few days ago, the Importation of Foreign Merchandise into the port of New-York, to the 30th of September, amounted to $186,893,000
Add two weeks in October 8,426,370
Total to date $195,319,370
Against same time, 1856 181,043,534
Increase to date $14,275,836

The same tables make the Export of Domestic Produce and Miscellaneous
Goods to the 30th September $54,363,000
Add two weeks in October 5,628,978
Total to date $59,991,978
Against same time, 1856 65,170,778
Decrease to date $5,178,800

The same tables make the direct export of specie to the 30th September $33,448,000
Add two weeks in October 230 000
Total to date ..... $33,[illegible]
Against same time, 1856 29,645,389
Increase to date $4,081,611

Stock Market had an adverse turn on Friday, after the mail by the Europa was delivered equal in several instances to 5 per cent. and in the case of New-York Central, which had previously gone up as high as 69½ per cent. the reaction was 10@11 per cent. On Saturday, toward the close of business, the tone of the market partially improved, and 1@2 per cent. higher prices were paid at the Second Board. The general market left off without animation, though under a less despondent feeling than ruled the day before. The changes since Saturday week exhibit a general decline, and the prominent ones were:

A correspondent inqures if another attempt, as he has heard intimated, is to be made at the Clearing House to enforce the settlement of balances between the banks in specie. We should say, certainly not before the general resumption by the banks to the public as well as to each other. Any attempt in the contrary direction, for the purpose, as it would be, to discredit country money, would more likely lead to the dissolution or disruption of the Clearing House itself. In reference to country currency, we have the following note from the Vice-President of the Metropolitan Bank:

METROPOLITAN BANK, NEW-YORK, Oct. 24, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

As there exists an impression that the circulating notes of the country Banks are sealed and stored in the vaults of this Bank only as a basis for the Clearing-House settlement of balances, and this to the detriment of the country Banks and the public, who, it is urged, need the currency, I take this opportunity to say that the City Banks will pay out all they can in their daily operations and deposit with this Bank only the remainder of their receipts. I also say that we will deliver to any person or any Bank such amounts of these bills as are wanted for circulation.

H. L. JACQUES, Vice-President.

The circulating notes of the Island City Bank are provided for, in full, by the Bank Department, and will be redeemed on presentation at the Manhattan Bank.

The Canal revenues of the State amount this season, to the close of the second week in October, to $1,598,313, or less by $487,039 than to the same period last season.

The circulating notes of the Lee Bank of Massachusetts, lately in trouble, have been restored to full credit at the Suffolk and Metropolitan Banks.

The Governor of Missouri is for further strong and direct measures to secure the prompt payment of interest on the Public Debt, and favors the stoppage of the issue to the Railways under par. In addition to the present Sinking and Interest Funds, provided by the last Legislature, he suggests that a direct tax be levied on the whole property of the State, at a rate to render certain, beyond all contingency, the payment of the interest. The present amount of [illegible] is $15,—of which $6,380,000 is the Pacific Railway, already in operation from St. Louis to Jefferson City.

The Providence Journal states that the immediate or cash liabilities of the Banks in Rhode Island are now reduced to $3,300,000, while their Bills Receivable and other assets amount to $18,800,000. It is intimated that the circulation of this little State has fallen into discredit, as compared with other New-England money, in Boston and New-York, by reason of the heavy burden of the renewal of mercantile paper which should have been paid in these cities and in Philadelphia.

The Illinois Central Company will resume payment on its interest coupons to-day. The amount overdue is $158,922. The notes payable of the concern, partly overdue, amount to $3,510,915, of which $413,578, secured by collateral or indorsed by the individual directors, are provided for, by preference, in the recent assignment. The reli
